Work on City Project Recalls Costly Dynamite Blast in 1910

Plan to Use Old Tunnel for Present Use of Uptown Area Nears Finish

A city project, which went down under to improve service and make way for growth, will be finished within the next few days.

It made use of an historic public works asset, which has been given little attention in the past 40 years, but which, at its beginning, was a topic about town.

Many residents, recalling events of the past century, will remember the scope and importance of the Washington avenue sewer tunnel, and they have not forgotten the night of Nov. 19, 1910 when a dynamite explosion along its course, rocked the city and left costly damage in its wake.

New York, then building the Ashokan reservoir and thereby diminishing the flow of the lower Esopus creek, decided to build the tunnel for Kingston to divert sewage flow from the creek. This meant the avoidance of damage claims which might arise from later conditions of pollution.

Is 6,210 Feet Long

The tunnel which is 6,210 feet long, was built at a depth of from 78 to 108 feet, and it shifted the flow of sewage from the Esopus toward the Rondout creek from a large uptown area.

Kingston decided more than a year ago to relieve a large residential section of storm water flood conditions and to improve the flow of sanitary sewage by making new use of 2,200 feet of the tunnel from Elizabeth to Gilead street for improved service.

The project started in October, 1951, and its first phase was the sinking of two shafts on Washington avenue in the vicinity of Elizabeth street by the C. W. Lauman Co., of New York.

Had to Fix Location

This first step posed the problem of determining the exact location of the tunnel under the street, City Engineer Arthur F. Hallinan explained, and most helpful in solving it, he said, was

Mancinelli Held As Bogus Doctor

Highland Man on $100 Bail for Hearing; Practiced 2 Years

Louis Mancinelli, 26, of Highland, has been arrested on a charge of practicing medicine without a license.

Mancinelli, who is free on $100 bail, will be given a hearing on the charge at 7 o'clock tonight before Justice of the Peace Albert Lester of the town of Lloyd.

He had practiced as a physician in that southern Ulster town for more than two years according to State Atorney General Nathaniel L. Goldstein, who instituted proceedings against Mancinelli after receiving inquiries from the Ulster County Medical Society, the Veterans Administration and United Medical Service.

Conviction on the charge, a violation of the State Education Law, carries a maximum possible penalty of $500 fine and one year in jail.

Arrested by Metzer

Mancinelli was arrested Oct. 24 by Trooper John Metzer, BCI, of the Highland state police substation. The arrest was not revealed at the time, and investigations were begun by several agencies relative to the issuance of prescriptions and death certificates issued by the defendant.

"We don't know yet if the defendant belonged to any medical societies," Attorney General Goldstein said in announcing Mancinelli's arrest this morning, "but last August 4 the Ulster County Medical Society inquired of the Department of Education to determine if Mancinelli was in fact licensed to practice . . . some two years after the man hung out his shingle."

Zelnick Has Become Prosecution Witness

New York, Oct. 31 (AP)—The government rested its case today in the Federal Court trial of H. Harold Miller, a Catskill, N. Y., accountant, on charges of extorting $3,000 from two upstate businessmen.

Yesterday Miller's co-defendant, Ernest Zelnick, a former internal revenue agent named in the same indictment, pleaded guilty to extorting $2,000 from one of the victims and then testified as a prosecution witness.

Zelnick and Miller were charged with extorting $2,000 from Vincent Di Stefani and $1,000 from his brother, Samuel, in connection with alleged errors in their income tax returns. The Di Stefanis live in Cairo, N. Y.

Under cross-examination today, Zelnick testified that at no time had the money involved been in his possession, claiming that Miller was the one who handled the money.

Zelnick said that during the transactions involving the extortions, he "became worried" and was interested only in seeing that Miller returned the money to the Di Stefani brothers.

Zelnick, 30, lives at 129 Down street, Kingston. Miller, 42, lives at 335 Main street, Catskill.

Wide Probe Is Begun in Metal Deal

Wilson Charges Lie

General Says Westbrook Has Talked Himself Into Suit

Washington, Oct. 31 (AP)—A "top-to-bottom" investigation was underway today into a government deal to buy nine million dollars of tungsten, already the center of a political storm and rough words on both sides of the Atlantic.

Defense Materials Administrator Jess Larson—who signed the contract and then canceled it as chief buyer of critical goods for the government—told a news conference yesterday he is heading the investigation.

Larson said one thing he wants cleared up is why he was not given an unsigned letter-contract which disclosed that the tungsten deal involved a 5 per cent fee to three men.

One of the three, Col. Lawrence Westbrook, was fired Wednesday night as a Democratic national committee official. Democratic Chairman Stephen A. Mitchell ordered the dismissal after a New York Herald Tribune story called the case "the biggest 5 per center deal ever exposed in Washington."

"No Wrongdoing' Evidence

Larson said he has found no evidence thus far of "wrongdoing or influence" in his agencies in connection with the contract for tungsten, a scarce metal used in steel production. He said he will publish all findings and, if there appears to be wrongdoing, will refer it to the Justice Department.

Westbrook, a research and development engineer and former army man, had been the Democratic committee's liaison with members of Congress since last Jan. 5. Recently he had been working in the Texas state campaign for the Democratic national ticket.

Westbrook told the Herald Tribune from Dallas he had done nothing wrong. He blamed the contract cancellation on an international group which he said wanted to sell strategic materials to the United States at a higher price than his client, a Portuguese firm called Companhia Atlantica.

One member of this rival group, Westbrook said, was Brig. Gen. Tom B. Wilson, European director of the Defense Materials Procurement Agency headed by Larson.

Wilson Issues Statement

In London, Wilson issued a statement last night saying Westbrook "has talked himself into a law suit." The statement said in part:

"I have been informed that I have been mentioned in a statement given to the American press by an individual named Westbrook as having been associated with an 'international gang' formed for the purpose of electing Gen. Eisenhower and cashing in on the United States government program for procuring strategic and critical materials.

"The charge is a vicious and unmitigated lie."

Wilson said he does not know Westbrook and has "no stake whatever in the outcome of the pending elections."

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the Republican candidate for president, said in a speech at New York yesterday that the case is the "sort of crookedness (that) goes on and on in Washington."

"They had to fire him because someone caught up with him," Eisenhower said of Westbrook.

Daily News Says Action to Be Based on Letter Written by Van Fleet to General Mood

Denial Is Made

HST Press Aide Declares There Is No Basis for Story

Washington, Oct. 31 (AP)—The great campaign debate over sending South Koreans into the line to replace American soldiers in Korea mushroomed like an atomic explosion today, billowing out to Tokyo and Paris.

At its vortex, the heat of the word battle brought a White House denial that Gen. James A. Van Fleet is being relieved as Eighth Army commander and, from secret Pentagon files, a mass of data showing:

1. Van Fleet's request that South Korean forces be doubled—from 10 to 20 divisions—was opposed as premature by Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, then United Nations commander in Tokyo and now supreme commander of North Atlantic Treaty (NATO) forces in Paris.

2. Ridgway's position was upheld by the joint chiefs of staff and Secretary of Defense Lovett.

3 The Defense Department says it has been carrying out a long-range program to turn over the defense of Korea to the South Koreans as soon as leaders can be trained and seasoned in combat.

4. Gen. Mark Clark, Ridgway's successor in Tokyo, has pursued this program and has submitted a longer-range proposal for further expansion, now being studied at the Pentagon.

To Be Kept Secret

The New York Daily News published a story today saying Van Fleet was being relieved for writing a letter quoted in a campaign speech by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the Republican candidate for president.

The News said the official orders are to be kept secret until after the voting next Tuesday. The story added that Van Fleet's successor in Korea will be Lt. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, now army deputy chief of staff for operation and administration.

At Detroit, where President Truman's entourage was campaigning for the Democratic ticket, a press aide said:

"President Truman has not fired Gen. Van Fleet and has no intention of firing him."

Orders Are Denied

Earlier, the Army and Defense Departments and Clark's Tokyo headquarters denied receiving any orders from the White House to relieve Van Fleet. Neither Clark nor Van Fleet, who was questioned at Seoul, would comment. A spokesman for Van Fleet said he does not plan to comment.

Eisenhower, on a radio-television broadcast from New York Wednesday night, read part of Van Fleet's letter in support of his contention that Republic of Korea (ROK) trops should man their own front lines as soon as possible.

The letter, dated Oct. 10, was

UN Troops Make Valiant Try to Recapture Hill

Slashing Rain, Machine Gunners Stall Off Assault Near Crest

By MILO FARNETI

Seoul, Oct. 31 (AP)—United Nations troops struggled toward the crest of Triangle Hill in a cold, slashing rain today after twice losing the vital Korean central front position to Chinese human wave assaults.

A correspondent John Randolph reported from the front that Red machinegun fire stalled the second allied counter-thrust in midafternoon about 150 yards from the muddy crest.

"The assault troops were hoping to find elements of two units that were isolated in the early morning attack and had disappeared behind the Chinese lines," Randolph said.

"An American officer at the scene said that only the utmost heroism of the two isolated units—and by a third unit that was cut up—prevented a breakthrough by the Chinese."

Entire Company Trapped

An entire allied company was trapped on the shell-blistered crest early Friday when 2,000 Reds overwhelmed UN troops in the worst setback of the bitter, 18-day see-saw battle.

An Eighth Army spokesman said the company was rescued when the allies regained Triangle's crest in a drizzling rain at 9:15 a. m.

The drizzle later became a bone-chilling downpour. Allied troops stayed on the height only 45 minutes. They were driven off by fresh waves of Chinese infantrymen and a storm of Communist artillery and mortar fire.

Randolph reported that, shortly thereafter, the UN troops began bulling their way back up the southern slopes of Triangle—in the teeth of the artillery barrage and automatic weapons fire.

Halloween Pranks Are Reported Few

Day-in-Advance Party Held at Auditorium for Big Crowd

Kingston's observance of Halloween a day in advance last night brought a record crowd to the municipal auditorium following the parade down Broadway.

The spirit of orderly fun prevailed and the police blotter recorded what appears to be a record low in mischief.

Only seven reports of misbehavior were recorded at police headquarters from 7.29 p. m., until 9 p. m., and these included one false alarm from Box 2221 at School No. 4 at 7:59 p. m. The fire department, however, had 11 calls for fires in leaves on various city streets.

The Department of Recreation estimates that about 10,000 turned out for the parade and auditorium party including those who saw the parade over the greater length of Broadway.

The Port Ewen Drum Corps appeared in Halloween costumes. The Forty and Eight locomotive added to the fun of the night and the lively marchers were youngsters of varying ages. A police motorcycle escort led the way.

Prizes Are Awarded

Audience reaction indicated the younger children were favorites when costume prizes were awarded and the lead-off winner was Leo Baxter, of 613 Broadway, who took top honors in the "most horrible" classification. He was a headless horseman.

Dorothy Smith, of 187½ Elmendorf street, took first prize in the most humorous, and Kathleen Brink, aged 3, of 61 Murray street, won the "most patriotic" honors in a red, white and blue costume.

Barbara Ann Heitzman, of 21 Terrance street, youngest of the first-place winners, as a cowgirl, won much applause, and Billy Norton, 24 Nicholas street, dressed as an old fashioned girl, won in the old fashioned classification. Unique among the winners was John Weiner, of 6 Downs street, who was dressed as Robinhood.

Prizes were donated by La Societe des Forty Hommes et Eight Chevaux, Ulster County Voiture 381, Fred Ertel, M. H. Herzog, Anjay Sales Co., Mont-

Convicts Quit Prior To Adlai's Appeal At Illinois Prison

Seven Hostages Are Freed After State Official on Safety Warns Prisoners

Chester, Ill., Oct. 31 (AP)—Convicts ended their four-day rebellion at Menard State Prison today and released their seven hostages before Gov. Adlai Stevenson carried out plans for making a personal appeal to them.

The rebel convicts capitulated after an ultimatum was delivered by Michael Seyfrit, state director of public safety.

Seyfrit told the insurgents, who had been bottled up in the prison's east cell block since Monday, that unless they surrendered heavily-armed state troopers would cut through the cell house doors with torches and "use whatever force is necessary to restore order."

After releasing their hostages,

Taft Blisters HST On Foreign Policy

Emphasizes Mess as Shown by Korean Situation With Van Fleet

Fort Wayne, Ind., Oct. 31 (AP)—Sen. Robert A. Taft moved into Ohio for more Republican campaign talks today after a blistering attack on President Truman and what he called "utterly unreliable" Democratic handling of American foreign policy.

The Ohio Republican senator told 2,200 persons last night in Fort Wayne, Indiana's third largest city, that President Truman and the Democrats are "wholly incompetent" and are trying not to win but to continue the Korean war.

Vile Rumors Are Spread, He Reports

Eisenhower Says First It Was Nazis, Then Reds, Now Democrats Who Work on Him

'I Am My Own Man'

No One Controls Him, He Tells Huge Throng at Garden

Enroute to Chicago With Eisenhower, Oct. 31 (AP) — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower headed for Chicago by plane today after three hard-driving days in New York where he said, in a climactic speech, the Democrats are trying to destroy him with a super-smear.

"They have made wild charges, spread vile rumors, and played fast and loose with the truth," he said.

"They are determined to destroy me; to destroy my life-long friendships, my reputation, my spirit.

"This has been some campaign! It has been shocking."

Eisenhower hurled these charges last night at a rip-roaring GOP rally in Madison Square Garden.

The Democrats turned their fire on him, personally, Eisenhower said, when they failed to prevent the unification he claims has taken place in the Republican party. He said he wasn't greatly perturbed on any personal basis.

Have Attacked Him

Recalling that the late Nazi propagandists, Joseph Goebbels and Julius Streicher, and more recently, the Russian "poison pen artists" have attacked him, the general grinned:

"I have been worked over by experts."

He closed by reasserting:

"I have made no deals in this campaign.

"No one has a claim on me.

"No one has a promise from me.

"No one has captured me.

"I am my own man."

23,000 Attend

The great arena was jammed. Edward Miller, head of the security forces for the building, fixed the attendance at 23,000.

Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson, the Democratic candidate, also filled the hall two nights earlier. Which of the two drew greater attendance could not be determined, since there were unknown numbers of standees to hear both candidates.

This was Eisenhower's blue chip effort in the New York area.

He spent three days this week in or near New York city, campaigning from morning until late at night. He worked a 13-hour schedule and sometimes longer. And he threw his full energy into the drive.

It all came to a colorful, noisy, and well-staged climax in the Garden.

Fore more than four hours before Eisenhower appeared, movie stars, sports figures, singers, dancers, political leaders — and more than 20 women from various walks of life—paraded across the stage.

Receives Deafening Applause

Finally, Eisenhower went before the television cameras, in a deafening roar of applause, and began his speech.

He quickly hit one of his main themes, recalling that some Democrats wanted him to be the party candidate in 1948.

That gave him the opportunity to say the opposition wanted him "to be the man to defend governmental corruption, excuse their coddling of Communists, and apologize for their vacillating policies."

He asked: "How could they dare think I was their man?"

Yet, Eisenhower said, he is the same man now as he was four years ago. He said he has not changed, and he is nobody's captive."

This apparently was a reply to Stevenson's claim that the general "swallowed" Sen. Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, "hook, line and sinker."

Eisenhower said he came home to run for president for three reasons—"many millions of Americans wanted me to . . . I wanted to work for peace . . . it remains my conviction that neither the present administration nor any candidate committed to it can

Pennsylvania May Cast 4,250,000 Votes; Polls Indicate Republicans Lead in State

(This is the fifth story in a series on the big states with large blocks of electoral votes. Today's story tells the situation in Pennsylvania where there are 32 electoral votes—second only to New York).

By CHARLES WELSH

Philadelphia, Oct. 31 (AP)—Talking with Republican and Democratic leaders about the probable result of the Nov. 4 presidential election in Pennsylvania you can't escape the thought they must be discussing two different contests.

Victory is in the bag, say spokesmen on both sides.

The known facts sum up about like this:

Pennsylvania had long been a Republican state until President Franklin D. Roosevelt won in 1936. He carried the state again in 1940 and 1944, each time by smaller margins. Republican Thomas E. Dewey won in 1948 by a solid 149,000 votes.

A record registration and widespread public interest practically guarantee a record vote, somewhere in the neighborhood of a 4,250,000 total, if recent percentage records are continued.

Both the state's two biggest cities, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, now have Democratic city governments. The federal payroll in the Keystone state is big. So is the state payroll, directed by a completely Republican state administration.

Most polls show Republicans ahead in Pennsylvania. Two weeks ago, an Associated Press survey of newspaper editors produced a composite opinion that Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower would receive 53 per cent of the vote had the election been held then, with 47 per cent going to Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson.

Editorially, most newspapers in the state are pro-Eisenhower.

There is some evidence on how party leaders appraise prospects for Pennsylvania's 32 electoral votes in the fact that both presidential nominees, and many other big name campaigners, chose to visit the state in the final week before election.

Eisenhower formally opened his campaign at a giant rally in Philadelphia Sept. 4. He came back for a day-long tour across the state this week and a major speech in Pittsburgh.

Democrats sent President Truman into Pennsylvania for what amounted to three days of whistlestopping last week. Stevenson chose yesterday and today to bid for Pennsylvania.

Here's what party leaders say:

Republican—National Committeeman G. Mason Owlett says "we'll do better than 1948—much better. I look for Eisenhower to win by 300,000. It could be as high as 500,000 although I'm not predicting that. I think we'll cut down the Democrat's 1948 majority of 73,000 in Pittsburgh, do

Kelly Pays for Local Killing In Electric Chair at Sing Sing

Edward H. Kelly, 53, of this city paid with his life last night in Sing Sing prison's electric chair for the murder he committed here two years ago.

Kelly was found guilty of shooting to death Mrs. Eloise McHugh, 44, on Main street in 1950 during a fit of jealousy. His first murder conviction was reversed by the Court of Appeals, but he was convicted again at a second trial.

Having earlier maintained he preferred death in the chair to life imprisonment, Kelly according to the Associated Press walked boldly into the death chamber at 11:09 p. m., accompanied by Sing Sing's Roman Catholic chaplain, the Rev. Thomas J. Donovan.

Calm and Silent

Kelly looked around calmly at the witnesses and said nothing. Then he sat down in the chair and closed his eyes before the mask was dropped over his face. He was pronounced dead three minutes later.

Ernest A. Kelly, funeral director of 111 West Chester street, was due in Ossining today to take charge of Kelly's body and to return it to Kingston for burial, Warden Wilfred L. Denno of Sing Sing Prison said.

"President Truman has not fired Gen. Van Fleet and has no intention of firing him."

Orders Are Denied

Earlier, the Army and Defense Departments and Clark's Tokyo headquarters denied receiving any orders from the White House to relieve Van Fleet. Neither Clark nor Van Fleet, who was questioned at Seoul, would comment. A spokesman for Van Fleet said he does not plan to comment.

Eisenhower, on a radio-television broadcast from New York Wednesday night, read part of Van Fleet's letter in support of his contention that Republic of Korea (ROK) trops should man their own front lines as soon as possible.

The letter, dated Oct. 10, was

Slashing Rain, Machine Gunners Stall Off Assault Near Crest

By MILO FARNETI

Seoul, Oct. 31 (AP)—United Nations troops struggled toward the crest of Triangle Hill in a cold, slashing rain today after twice losing the vital Korean central front position to Chinese human wave assaults.

A correspondent John Randolph reported from the front that Red machinegun fire stalled the second allied counter-thrust in midafternoon about 150 yards from the muddy crest.

"The assault troops were hoping to find elements of two units that were isolated in the early morning attack and had disappeared behind the Chinese lines," Randolph said.

"An American officer at the scene said that only the utmost heroism of the two isolated units—and by a third unit that was cut up—prevented a breakthrough by the Chinese."

Entire Company Trapped

An entire allied company was trapped on the shell-blistered crest early Friday when 2,000 Reds overwhelmed UN troops in the worst setback of the bitter, 18-day see-saw battle.

An Eighth Army spokesman said the company was rescued when the allies regained Triangle's crest in a drizzling rain at 9:15 a. m.

The drizzle later became a bone-chilling downpour. Allied troops stayed on the height only 45 minutes. They were driven off by fresh waves of Chinese infantrymen and a storm of Communist artillery and mortar fire.

Randolph reported that, shortly thereafter, the UN troops began bulling their way back up the southern slopes of Triangle—in the teeth of the artillery barrage and automatic weapons fire.

Halloween Pranks Are Reported Few

Day-in-Advance Party Held at Auditorium for Big Crowd

Kingston's observance of Halloween a day in advance last night brought a record crowd to the municipal auditorium following the parade down Broadway.

The spirit of orderly fun prevailed and the police blotter recorded what appears to be a record low in mischief.

Only seven reports of misbehavior were recorded at police headquarters from 7.29 p. m., until 9 p. m., and these included one false alarm from Box 2221 at School No. 4 at 7:59 p. m. The fire department, however, had 11 calls for fires in leaves on various city streets.

The Department of Recreation estimates that about 10,000 turned out for the parade and auditorium party including those who saw the parade over the greater length of Broadway.

The Port Ewen Drum Corps appeared in Halloween costumes. The Forty and Eight locomotive added to the fun of the night and the lively marchers were youngsters of varying ages. A police motorcycle escort led the way.

Prizes Are Awarded

Audience reaction indicated the younger children were favorites when costume prizes were awarded and the lead-off winner was Leo Baxter, of 613 Broadway, who took top honors in the "most horrible" classification. He was a headless horseman.

Dorothy Smith, of 187½ Elmendorf street, took first prize in the most humorous, and Kathleen Brink, aged 3, of 61 Murray street, won the "most patriotic" honors in a red, white and blue costume.

Barbara Ann Heitzman, of 21 Terrance street, youngest of the first-place winners, as a cowgirl, won much applause, and Billy Norton, 24 Nicholas street, dressed as an old fashioned girl, won in the old fashioned classification. Unique among the winners was John Weiner, of 6 Downs street, who was dressed as Robinhood.

Prizes were donated by La Societe des Forty Hommes et Eight' Chevaux, Ulster County Voiture 381, Fred Ertel, M. H. Herzog, Anjay Sales Co., Mont-

Seven Hostages Are Freed After State Official on Safety Warns Prisoners

Chester, Ill., Oct. 31 (AP)—Convicts ended their four-day rebellion at Menard State Prison today and released their seven hostages before Gov. Adlai Stevenson carried out plans for making a personal appeal to them.

The rebel convicts capitulated after an ultimatum was delivered by Michael Seyfrit, state director of public safety.

Seyfrit told the insurgents, who had been bottled up in the prison's east cell block since Monday, that unless they surrendered heavily-armed state troopers would cut through the cell house doors with torches and "use whatever force is necessary to restore order."

After releasing their hostages,

Fort Wayne, Ind., Oct. 31 (AP)—Sen. Robert A. Taft moved into Ohio for more Republican campaign talks today after a blistering attack on President Truman and what he called "utterly unreliable" Democratic handling of American foreign policy.

The Ohio Republican senator told 2,200 persons last night in Fort Wayne, Indiana's third largest city, that President Truman and the Democrats are "wholly incompetent" and are trying not to win but to continue the Korean war.

Declaring the Democratic administration "has got us into the worst mess we have ever been in,"

Vile Rumors Are Spread, He Reports

Eisenhower Says First It Was Nazis, Then Reds, Now Democrats Who Work on Him

'I Am My Own Man'

No One Controls Him, He Tells Huge Throng at Garden

Enroute to Chicago With Eisenhower, Oct. 31 (AP) — Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower headed for Chicago by plane today after three hard-driving days in New York where he said, in a climactic speech, the Democrats are trying to destroy him with a super-smear.

"They have made wild charges, spread vile rumors, and played fast and loose with the truth," he said.

"They are determined to destroy me; to destroy my life-long friendships, my reputation, my spirit.

"This has been some campaign! It has been shocking."

Eisenhower hurled these charges last night at a rip-roaring GOP rally in Madison Square Garden.

The Democrats turned their fire on him, personally, Eisenhower said, when they failed to prevent the unification he claims has taken place in the Republican party. He said he wasn't greatly perturbed on any personal basis.

Have Attacked Him

Recalling that the late Nazi propagandists, Joseph Goebbels and Julius Streicher, and more recently, the Russian "poison pen artists" have attacked him, the general grinned:

"I have been worked over by experts."

He closed by reasserting:

"I have made no deals in this campaign.

"No one has a claim on me.

"No one has a promise from me.

"No one has captured me.

"I am my own man."

23,000 Attend

The great arena was jammed. Edward Miller, head of the security forces for the building, fixed the attendance at 23,000.

Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson, the Democratic candidate, also filled the hall two nights earlier. Which of the two drew greater attendance could not be determined, since there were unknown numbers of standees to hear both candidates.

This was Eisenhower's blue chip effort in the New York area.

He spent three days this week in or near New York city, campaigning from morning until late at night. He worked a 13-hour schedule and sometimes longer. And he threw his full energy into the drive.

It all came to a colorful, noisy, and well-staged climax in the Garden.

Fore more than four hours before Eisenhower appeared, movie stars, sports figures, singers, dancers, political leaders — and more than 20 women from various walks of life—paraded across the stage.

Receives Deafening Applause

Finally, Eisenhower went before the television cameras, in a deafening roar of applause, and began his speech.

He quickly hit one of his main themes, recalling that some Democrats wanted him to be the party candidate in 1948.

That gave him the opportunity to say the opposition wanted him "to be the man to defend governmental corruption, excuse their coddling of Communists, and apologize for their vacillating policies."

He asked: "How could they dare think I was their man?"

Yet, Eisenhower said, he is the same man now as he was four years ago. He said he has not changed, and he is nobody's captive."

This apparently was a reply to Stevenson's claim that the general "swallowed" Sen. Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, "hook, line and sinker."

Eisenhower said he came home to run for president for three reasons—"many millions of Americans wanted me to . . . I wanted to work for peace . . . it remains my conviction that neither the present administration nor any candidate committed to it can

Pennsylvania May Cast 4,250,000 Votes; Polls Indicate Republicans Lead in State

(This is the fifth story in a series on the big states with large blocks of electoral votes. Today's story tells the situation in Pennsylvania where there are 32 electoral votes—second only to New York).

By CHARLES WELSH

Philadelphia, Oct. 31 (AP)—Talking with Republican and Democratic leaders about the probable result of the Nov. 4 presidential election in Pennsylvania you can't escape the thought they must be discussing two different contests.

Victory is in the bag, say spokesmen on both sides.

The known facts sum up about like this:

Pennsylvania had long been a Republican state until President Franklin D. Roosevelt won in 1936. He carried the state again in 1940 and 1944, each time by smaller margins. Republican Thomas E. Dewey won in 1948 by a solid 149,000 votes.

A record registration and widespread public interest practically guarantee a record vote, somewhere in the neighborhood of a 4,250,000 total, if recent percentage records are continued.

Both the state's two biggest cities, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, now have Democratic city governments. The federal payroll in the Keystone state is big. So is the state payroll, directed by a completely Republican state administration.

Most polls show Republicans ahead in Pennsylvania. Two weeks ago, an Associated Press survey of newspaper editors produced a composite opinion that Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower would receive 53 per cent of the vote had the election been held then, with 47 per cent going to Democrat Adlai E. Stevenson.

Editorially, most newspapers in the state are pro-Eisenhower.

There is some evidence on how party leaders appraise prospects for Pennsylvania's 32 electoral votes in the fact that both presidential nominees, and many other big name campaigners, chose to visit the state in the final week before election.

Eisenhower formally opened his campaign at a giant rally in Philadelphia Sept. 4. He came back for a day-long tour across the state this week and a major speech in Pittsburgh.

Democrats sent President Truman into Pennsylvania for what amounted to three days of whistlestopping last week. Stevenson chose yesterday and today to bid for Pennsylvania.

Here's what party leaders say:

Republican—National Committeeman G. Mason Owlett says "we'll do better than 1948—much better. I look for Eisenhower to win by 300,000. It could be as high as 500,000 although I'm not predicting that. I think we'll cut down the Democrat's 1948 majority of 73,000 in Pittsburgh, do

Kelly Pays for Local Killing In Electric Chair at Sing Sing

Edward H. Kelly, 53, of this city paid with his life last night in Sing Sing prison's electric chair for the murder he committed here two years ago.

Kelly was found guilty of shooting to death Mrs. Eloise McHugh, 44, on Main street in 1950 during a fit of jealousy. His first murder conviction was reversed by the Court of Appeals, but he was convicted again at a second trial.

Having earlier maintained he preferred death in the chair to life imprisonment, Kelly according to the Associated Press walked boldly into the death chamber at 11:09 p. m., accompanied by Sing Sing's Roman Catholic chaplain, the Rev. Thomas J. Donovan.

Calm and Silent

Kelly looked around calmly at the witnesses and said nothing. Then he sat down in the chair and closed his eyes before the mask was dropped over his face. He was pronounced dead three minutes later.

Ernest A. Kelly, funeral director of 111 West Chester street, was due in Ossining today to take charge of Kelly's body and to return it to Kingston for burial, Warden Wilfred L. Denno of Sing Sing Prison said.

Army Asks Right To Move Tanks

Berlin, Oct. 31 (AP)—The U. S. Army asked East German railway officials today for a conference to work out a compromise which would permit the shipment of eight Patton tanks and 20 army buses from West Germany to Berlin.

The Soviet Zone railway system refused yesterday to grant clearance for the tanks now on flatcars at Brunswick. The buses have been held up since Oct. 18.

The army said in a statement that the refusal came from the East Germans. Yesterday, an army spokesman blamed it on the Russians.

The Army Transportation Corps, in trying to meet with the East German railway officials, set what was regarded as a precedent. In the past such problems have been handled with the Russians on the theory that the allies do not recognize the Communist East German Government.

'Jeopardy' Feared

The East zone railway contended that the roadbed and several bridges might be jeopardized by the 47-ton tanks. Six tanks came in by rail without incident two weeks ago. The east argued also that the buses on top of flatcars would be too high to clear several overpasses.

In another phase of east-west difficulties, allied officials today abandoned as useless the practice of presenting highway patrols at the Soviet frontier outside Berlin. The issue was referred to their high commissioners.

The American and British city commands had tried since Monday to obtain Russian permission for unarmed patrols to cruise the 100-mile East Zone stretch of the autobahn as a protection for allied motorists whose cars break down.

Dulles Tells of Plea

Philadelphia, Oct. 31 (AP)—John Foster Dulles, Republican foreign policy expert, says that when he visited South Korea last year, President Syngman Rhee "begged me for more equipment to use more Korean troops" on the United Nations' front line. Dulles appeared with W. Averell Harriman, mutual security director, in a debate during a meeting yesterday of the World Affairs Council.

185 Applications Received

Arthur A. Davis, Jr., chairman of the Kingston Housing Authority said today that 185 application forms for apartments in Colonial Gardens, the city's housing project off Flatbush avenue, have been applied for, and of these 80 have been filled out and returned, to date.

Mancinelli Held

that the county medical society began checking on the Highland man after the Veterans Administration made inquiries of them. Not finding his name in the state medical directory, local society officials communicated with the State Department of Education's bureau of licensing.

The Veterans Administration at the same time communicated with that bureau and an investigator from the State Department of Education was assigned to the case. Trooper Metzer was also requested to work on the case by that department.

Mancinelli, who had not joined the Ulster County Medical Society, resided in Newburgh before moving to Highland, and inquiries by local society officials established that he was not a member of the Orange County Medical Society, it was reported.

Following the Education Department's probe into Mancinelli's credentials, the Federal Narcotics Bureau in New York city showed that the number used by the "doctor" for his narcotics registration as required by law was actually issued to another physician, Goldstein reported.

Made Prescriptions

In 13 days this past summer, Mancinelli issued 13 prescriptions which were filled in one of the two principal pharmacies in Highland. One of the prescriptions alleged was issued for narcotics.

Goldstein also revealed that death certificates issued by Mancinelli will be turned over to District Attorney Louis G. Bruhn to determine if there was violation of local laws covering their issuance.

Gave Death Certificates

Three death certificates listed by Goldstein were one for Susan Harriman, a widow, who died April 18, 1950, in which Mancinelli gave coronary thrombosis as the cause of death; one issued Dec. 24, 1950, for Liborio Sparacio, also giving coronary thrombosis as cause of death; and one for Ruth Martin, who presumably died of cancer on April 7, 1952. All of the patients lived in Highland.

In Kingston this noon, District Attorney Bruhn said he had not as yet received any official communication from the attorney general regarding the case.

Didn't Finish Course

According to the attorney general, Mancinelli told an investigator that he spent several years "at a Michigan university" but that he never completed his medical studies.

Mancinelli, who is married and has two children, resides on New Paltz turnpike in Highland.

London Sees Close Race

London, Oct. 31 (AP)—A big London-bookie rated the American presidential election a neck-and-neck race today. Bookmaker Douglas "Always Pays" Stuart set his odds at 4 to 5 and pick your candidate—that is you put up five dollars to win four. Bets were still coming pretty fast, his spokesman said, "with not the slightest sign of a leaning toward either candidate."

Financial and Commercial

New York, Oct. 31 (AP)—A broad ripple of buying, with the emphasis in rails and motors, spread through the stock exchange today and accounted for a comfortable advance.

Gains were well distributed throughout the list and ran from fractions to around 2 points.

Along with the price increases, volume expanded to the best rate of the week—well above the million share mark.

Chrysler was a focal point of demand in the auto section. It started unchanged, traded a block of 4,400 shares unchanged at 82, and then marched forward for a gain of around two points at times.

In addition to the key sections of motors and rails, some of the better gains were shown in rubbers, mail order issues, chemicals, and utilities.

Two blocks of 10,000 shares each of United Corp. went at 5, unchanged from the previous close. A block of 3,500 shares of Chicago Corp. was traded unchanged at 18⅛.

Among stocks showing a gain of a point or better during the day were Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Consolidated Natural Gas, American Cyanamid, duPont, Santa Fe, Southern Railway, Goodrich, and Union Pacific. Others advancing included U. S. Steel, General Motors, Boeing, Radio Corp., American Telephone, Western Union, Kennecott Copper, Dow Chemical, New York Central, and Standard Oil (N. J.).

Fulbright Pinch-Hits

Halloween Mask Found Flammable

Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy said today he had made a test with a mask of the type reported dangerously inflammable, and he found it to be so.

Reports yesterday indicated that the masks had been sold throughout the state, and an investigation by Chief Murphy revealed that a few uptown stores which had them, had removed them from counters following warnings from New York sources.

The masks are of the type which cover the eyes and the upper part of the face and Chief Murphy said the one which he burned was "highly inflammable."

All persons who think they have this type of mask in the house should take no risks with them, the chief said. No child should be allowed to wear one, he stressed, and they should be destroyed.

The city officially observed Halloween last night, but children may use their masks if they are in their homes. Parents, whose children may have private parties in their homes tonight, should make sure that no such masks are used by the youngsters.

Fire officials in many cities of the state, including New York, searched store shelves and counters yesterday in a hunt for the inflammable masks, and warnings were issued to inform the public of their danger.

Army Asks Right To Move Tanks

Berlin, Oct. 31 (AP)—The U. S. Army asked East German railway officials today for a conference to work out a compromise which would permit the shipment of eight Patton tanks and 20 army buses from West Germany to Berlin.

The Soviet Zone railway system refused yesterday to grant clearance for the tanks now on flatcars at Brunswick. The buses have been held up since Oct. 18.

The army said in a statement that the refusal came from the East Germans. Yesterday, an army spokesman blamed it on the Russians.

The Army Transportation Corps, in trying to meet with the East German railway officials, set what was regarded as a precedent. In the past such problems have been handled with the Russians on the theory that the allies do not recognize the Communist East German Government.

'Jeopardy' Feared

The East zone railway contended that the roadbed and several bridges might be jeopardized by the 47-ton tanks. Six tanks came in by rail without incident two weeks ago. The east argued also that the buses on top of flatcars would be too high to clear several overpasses.

In another phase of east-west difficulties, allied officials today abandoned as useless the practice of presenting highway patrols at the Soviet frontier outside Berlin. The issue was referred to their high commissioners.

The American and British city commands had tried since Monday to obtain Russian permission for unarmed patrols to cruise the 100-mile East Zone stretch of the autobahn as a protection for allied motorists whose cars break down.

Discusses Tungsten Contract

Mancinelli Held

that the county medical society began checking on the Highland man after the Veterans Administration made inquiries of them. Not finding his name in the state medical directory, local society officials communicated with the State Department of Education's bureau of licensing.

The Veterans Administration at the same time communicated with that bureau and an investigator from the State Department of Education was assigned to the case. Trooper Metzer was also requested to work on the case by that department.

Mancinelli, who had not joined the Ulster County Medical Society, resided in Newburgh before moving to Highland, and inquiries by local society officials established that he was not a member of the Orange County Medical Society, it was reported.

Following the Education Department's probe into Mancinelli's credentials, the Federal Narcotics Bureau in New York city showed that the number used by the "doctor" for his narcotics registration as required by law was actually issued to another physician, Goldstein reported.

Made Prescriptions

In 13 days this past summer, Mancinelli issued 13 prescriptions which were filled in one of the two principal pharmacies in Highland. One of the prescriptions alleged was issued for narcotics.

Goldstein also revealed that death certificates issued by Mancinelli will be turned over to District Attorney Louis G. Bruhn to determine if there was violation of local laws covering their issuance.

Gave Death Certificates

Three death certificates listed by Goldstein were one for Susan Harriman, a widow, who died April 18, 1950, in which Mancinelli gave coronary thrombosis as the cause of death; one issued Dec. 24, 1950, for Liborio Sparacio, also giving coronary thrombosis as cause of death; and one for Ruth Martin, who presumably died of cancer on April 7, 1952. All of the patients lived in Highland.

In Kingston this noon, District Attorney Bruhn said he had not as yet received any official communication from the attorney general regarding the case.

Didn't Finish Course

According to the attorney general, Mancinelli told an investigator that he spent several years "at a Michigan university" but that he never completed his medical studies.

Mancinelli, who is married and has two children, resides on New Paltz turnpike in Highland.

London Sees Close Race

London, Oct. 31 (AP)—A big London-bookie rated the American presidential election a neck-and-neck race today. Bookmaker Douglas "Always Pays" Stuart set his odds at 4 to 5 and pick your candidate—that is you put up five dollars to win four. Bets were still coming pretty fast, his spokesman said, "with not the slightest sign of a leaning toward either candidate."

Financial and Commercial

New York, Oct. 31 (AP)—A broad ripple of buying, with the emphasis in rails and motors, spread through the stock exchange today and accounted for a comfortable advance.

Gains were well distributed throughout the list and ran from fractions to around 2 points.

Along with the price increases, volume expanded to the best rate of the week—well above the million share mark.

Chrysler was a focal point of demand in the auto section. It started unchanged, traded a block of 4,400 shares unchanged at 82, and then marched forward for a gain of around two points at times.

In addition to the key sections of motors and rails, some of the better gains were shown in rubbers, mail order issues, chemicals, and utilities.

Two blocks of 10,000 shares each of United Corp. went at 5, unchanged from the previous close. A block of 3,500 shares of Chicago Corp. was traded unchanged at 18⅛.

Among stocks showing a gain of a point or better during the day were Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Consolidated Natural Gas, American Cyanamid, duPont, Santa Fe, Southern Railway, Goodrich, and Union Pacific. Others advancing included U. S. Steel, General Motors, Boeing, Radio Corp., American Telephone, Western Union, Kennecott Copper, Dow Chemical, New York Central, and Standard Oil (N. J.).

Ives Gives Outline Of Major Issues: Peace and Mess

New York, Oct. 31 (AP) — Sen. Irving M. Ives (R.-N.Y.) says world peace and "lack of integrity" in Washington are the major issues in the 1952 presidential campaign.

Ives spoke last night at the Republican rally in Madison Square Garden.

The senator, who is seeking reelection, said the American people have "two mighty yearnings," adding:

"The first is for peace—peace in Korea, peace in Europe, peace in the world, peace with honor, without surrender or sacrifice of principle * * *.

"Secondly * * * the American people believe in moral standards and decency. They look toward the Washington of recent years—toward a shocking scene of corruption and greed and self-enrichment. They listen to wild denials of guilt. * * * This lack of integrity is what they intend to change."

In an earlier televised speech, Ives said GOP presidential nominee Dwight D. Eisenhower has "first hand knowledge" of the Russians and will, if elected, gain in Korea "a victory and not have to retire by defeat."

Back on the Peninsula

Triesta Free Territory (AP) — First Lt. Jack C. Montgomery of Muskogee, Okla., can't seem to get away from the Italian peninsula. In 1944, President Roosevelt presented him with the Congressional Medal of Honor for heroism on the Anzio beachhead. Montgomery then thought he'd seen the last of Italy, especially since he left the army in 1945. In 1950 he was recalled to active duty and sent overseas again — to Trieste.

Willow Navy Veteran Gets Recent Promotion

Richard R. Ford, 28, has been promoted to machine accountant, first class, USN, as a result of recent fleet wide examinations. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Ford of Willow.

Stationed at NAS San Diego, Ford works in the personnel accounting machine installation of Commander Air Force, Pacific Fleet. It is his job to supervise IBM records going from his command to the Navy Bureau of Personnel.

Entering the navy as a reserve in 1942, Ford saw World War 2 action in both the Atlantic and Pacific. At that time he was a signalman, second class. During the war he was awarded the American Theatre ribbon, the European Theatre ribbon, and the Asiatic-Pacific ribbon with one battle star for Okinawa. In 1946 Ford enlisted in the regular navy as a seaman and worked up to his present rate as a machine accountant. He served in Boston until 1950 when he reported to his present command.

Caps Mark End of Duty

With the U. S. 1st Marine Air Wing in Korea (AP)—A cluster of caps are nailed above the door of the Officers Club at a Marine ground control intercept squadron headquarters and behind each cap—but one—is the story of a successfully completed combat tour. It all began when an air force captain, flying B-26 light bombers against the Communists, told the marines to nail his cap to the wall. "I won't be needing it any more," the flier said. "Tonight's my last mission and after that I'm heading for home." That night the captain was shot down by Red anti-aircraft fire. His jaunty cap, adorned with captain's bars and his wings, still hangs over the door. It's been joined by nearly 50 other caps of all the services. But it's a tradition now not to hang up your cap until you've flown your last mission, gone on your last patrol, completed your last official duty—and have orders home in your hands.

High Schoolers Race

New York (AP)—Students from the ship John W. Brown, believed to be the only floating maritime high school in the United States, held a lifeboat race in the East river recently with two nine-man crews of seniors. The crews raced from 34th street to 24th street with a Coast Guard patrol boat keeping pace. The engineers defeated the deck force for the first time in the five years the race has been held. Since 1937 the schoolship, an annex of the Board of Education's Metropolitan Vocational High School, has graduated about 800 seamen. The average age of students is from 17 to 18.

Pat Ward Lawyer Accused of Getting Girl Intoxicated

New York, Oct. 31 (AP) — The lawyer of 19-year-old Pat Ward, a material witness in the city's vice scandal, has been accused of getting her drunk—a charge the attorney vigorously denies.

Miss Ward, who has no criminal charge against her, lost her parole yesterday and was ordered to put up $25,000 bail.

Previously paroled in the custody of her mother as a witness against Minot (Mickey) Jelke, margarine heir accused of operating a high-priced call girl racket, the young woman has been under 24-hour police guard.

Verbal fireworks flashed in general sessions court yesterday between Miss Ward's lawyer, former magistrate J. Roland Sala, and Assistant District Attorney Anthony J. Leibler, who has been spearheading the vice probe.

Leibler told Judge Edward J. McCullen, Jr.:

"She and Sala spent their time drinking brandy, drinking highballs and, in one instance, she became quite intoxicated, and not only that, Sala took her to night clubs a good deal."

Leibler also accused Sala of telling police "to stay out of range and he (Sala) stayed at her apartment until four, five and six o'clock in the morning."

Angrily denying the accusations, Sala told the court:

"She's a little girl they're trying to destroy, and has no means of getting any relaxation. She hasn't enough money to live on * * *. It's probably the thinking of the district attorney's office in this case that's intoxicated. She never even reached that point we call high."

Sala said a policewoman was along when he took Miss Ward, whose real name is Sandra Wisotsky, to a night club.

As for visiting her apartment, Sala said his client's mother always was present and added:

"I am so scrupulous in these cases that when I went to see Miss Ward I kept my coat on, I kept my hat on, I kept the door open."

As a member of the committee on open-end mortgages, DeWitt will take part in developing adequate forms and procedures for making the new open-end mortgage.

Ives Gives Outline Of Major Issues: Peace and Mess

New York, Oct. 31 (AP) — Sen. Irving M. Ives (R.-N.Y.) says world peace and "lack of integrity" in Washington are the major issues in the 1952 presidential campaign.

Ives spoke last night at the Republican rally in Madison Square Garden.

The senator, who is seeking re-election, said the American people have "two mighty yearnings," adding:

"The first is for peace—peace in Korea, peace in Europe, peace in the world, peace with honor, without surrender or sacrifice of principle * * *.

"Secondly * * * the American people believe in moral standards and decency. They look toward the Washington of recent years—toward a shocking scene of corruption and greed and self-enrichment. They listen to wild denials of guilt. * * * This lack of integrity is what they intend to change."

In an earlier televised speech, Ives said GOP presidential nominee Dwight D. Eisenhower has "first hand knowledge" of the Russians and will, if elected, gain in Korea "a victory and not have to retire by defeat."

Triesta Free Territory (AP) — First Lt. Jack C. Montgomery of Muskogee, Okla., can't seem to get away from the Italian peninsula. Montgomery then thought he'd seen the last of Italy, especially since he left the army in 1945. In 1950 he was recalled to active duty and sent overseas again — to Trieste.

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, OCTOBER 31, 1952

REPUBLICAN CONGRESS

The only sure way to guarantee cleaning up the mess in Washington is by the election of General Eisenhower and Senator Nixon and a Republican Congress. In order to achieve the necessary cleanup in the Federal government, the general must have a Republican Congress to produce a workable team for carrying out the party's platform.

If it is to work effectively in restoring to Washington a high standard of constitutional government that has been unknown during the Truman regime, the new administration will need a closely-knitted, harmonious organization. The campaign for the standard-bearers of the Republican Party should be tied in with an equally vigorous effort to elect Republican senators and representatives, pledged to support the administration program of ending the waste, extravagance and corruption in the nation's capital.

In this senatorial district, Irving M. Ives is the Republican candidate for the office of the United States Senator and in this congressional district, J. Ernest Wharton is the Republican candidate for representative in Congress.

OFFICERS' VOTING

"My mother was a Democrat, my father a Republican. I am an Episcopalian. I have never voted and shall not do so this fall." Thus General George C. Marshall revealed to reporters that he was following an old army custom. Cadets at Virginia Military Institute, which Marshall attended, and at West Point, learn that their duty is to obey their commander-in-chief, the President, regardless of party. This rule may inculcate an indifference to politics which ends in keeping officers away from the polls.

An added reason for abstention is that changes of post often prevent an officer from striking roots anywhere. Often they do not stay in any one place long enough to become eligible to vote.

This habit of army officers is fairly well known. Yet General Marshall hardly helped the cause of good citizenship by advertising his habitual abstention. With an important election in the offing and a widespread drive to get out a large vote, Marshall's statement could have been spared, except as it emphasizes the fact that something should be done to give all servicemen, high or low, their rightful chance to express their wishes at the polls.

OUR SAVINGS NEED NEW PROTECTION

Since the end of 1945 the living-cost index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics has risen 62 points. This inflationary spiral has swept away 32 per cent of the value of the $142,700,000,000 held as savings by the American people at that date.

According to figures of the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company, that drastic cut is 20 times the loss suffered by U. S. bank depositors in all the bank failures the country has had since the end of the Civil War. In money terms, the cut is $45,700,000,000.

Thus inflation has each year taken a toll averaging five per cent from all our money in whatever form — pay checks, pensions, savings bonds, bank accounts.

The loss obviously is staggering and it is personal—felt by every one of us. And it points a lesson about the state of our home-front affairs.

There was a time when one of the most important things to an average man was having the assurance that the money he had in the bank was safe against the bank's failure. He has gained that protection.

But today that isn't enough. When the inroads of inflation in a year's time can outmatch dozens of bank failures, it is obvious that the ordinary citizen needs a new kind of protection now. And he isn't getting it.

This is a problem uppermost in the minds of many voters and millions will cast their ballot for General Eisenhower, who will do most about it.

There are many dangers in kicking a man when he is down. One of them is what he will do when he gets back up.

'These Days'

By GEORGE SOKOLSKY

COMMUNISTS AT THE U.N.

First the Federal Grand Jury in New York and then the McCarran Committee have brought to light the cell of American Communists who have been using the United Nations as a base and sanctuary. Credit for this magnificent job of investigation must go to Roy N. Cohen of the Department of Justice and Robert Morris of the McCarran Committee.

The vital question is: when is an American not an American while continuing to enjoy all the privileges and benefits of an American?

This is a tough one to answer. These hearings really started in May when the McCarran Committee called before it David Weintraub, director of Economic Stability and Development of the United Nations, a high official. The committee counsel felt that it "became apparent that Mr. Weintraub had caused to be employed by the United Nations, certain individuals." Mr. Weintraub had been in the State Department. The committee in May was investigating the numerous activities of Owen Lattimore and it appears that Lattimore was recommended by Weintraub to a United Nations job having to do with economic assistance for Afghanistan. Yet the fact is that Lattimore is an expert neither on economics nor Afghanistan. This is Weintraub's testimony on the subject:

"Mr. Sourwine. Had anyone suggested to you that he (Lattimore) would be suitable . . . for a job of this kind or for employment by the United Nations?

"Mr. Weintraub: I don't recollect anyone having suggested that to me.

"Mr. Sourwine. You just chose his name yourself?

"Mr. Weintraub: I think so.

"Mr. Sourwine. Did you know him as an expert in Afghanistan matters?

"Mr. Weintraub. No; I knew of him only as an expert in general Far-Eastern affairs.

"Mr. Sourwine. Did you know whether he had written anything about Afghanistan?

"Mr. Weintraub. No; I did not.

"Mr. Sourwine. Did you know whether he had been in Afghanistan?

"Mr. Weintraub. No; I did not.

"Mr. Sourwine. Do you consider Afghanistan a Far-Eastern nation?

"Mr. Weintraub. Technically Afghanistan is classified as a Middle-Eastern country."

Yet, Weintraub believed that Lattimore is an expert on Afghanistan because he had been to Mongolia. If you look at a map, you will see how far-fetched that is. Also there is no linguistic relationship. Mr. Weintraub did not come off so well with that one and undoubtedly it opened the broad question as to who Weintraub is and whence derived his power.

David Weintraub came to the United States in 1921 at the age of 17 from Austrian Poland. He was naturalized in 1926. He studied at the City College of New York and Columbia University and was employed by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of which Sidney Hillman was the head. He was also employed by the National Bureau of Economic Research under Professor Leo Wolman of Columbia University. Wolman recommended Weintraub to Harry Hopkins who employed him in the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. His first international job was with UNRRA.

However, he had also been employed by the War Production Board and the State Department. It was from UNRRA that he went to the United Nations. In the United Nations, Weintraub is in charge of economic planning for the entire world. With regard to that, his views are:

"Mr. Sourwine. Did you ever take the position that the Point Four program should be administered by an international organization and not by the United States?

"Mr. Weintraub. Yes.

"Mr. Sourwine. Would you care to expand on that? You might feel that in justice to yourself you should do so.

"Mr. Weintraub. Yes. The program in question is a program of technical assistance for the economic development of underdeveloped countries. That question had been under discussion in the United Nations for years—meaning, by that, the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council and various committees and commissions—and along with others I felt that that kind of activity is peculiarly suited for an international organization so as to put underdeveloped countries in a position of receiving economic assistance of that character from an organization of their own rather than receiving it on a bilateral basis from individual governments.

"I agree with the position, and I am sure I must have said so to many people at various times."

In the present line of investigation, the McCarran Committee is seeking apparently to discover why so large a cell of American Communists exists in the United Nations. The gist of David Weintraub's testimony has been a flat denial that he is the person responsible. In fact, he has denied on interrogation that he recommended specified persons for employment. Thus far, no testimony had been adduced to the contrary. Nevertheless, it is important to note David Weintraub's story because of those questioned by the committee are in his department of the United Nations.

PREVENTING AILMENTS IN THE ELDERLY

"It is well known by lawyers, plumbers, garage mechanics, and other purveyors of personal services that the public is more ready to make an economic sacrifice to get out of trouble than to stay out.

In medicine this vagary of human nature is demonstrated by the rather adequate remuneration for a routine appendectomy as compared with that of a diagnostic survey (complete physical examination including laboratory and other tests) which certainly takes longer and probably demands at least an equal degree of professional ability." I am quoting Dr. Benjamin V. White, Hartford, Attending Physician, Hospital for Chronic Illness, Rocky Hill, Conn., in Geriatrics.

Dr. White has in mind the importance of preparing the middle-aged and elderly to be reasonably free of preventable ailments in the days to come by giving them a thorough examination before they reach old age. As we know, most physicians are not interested in the "well" patient and it is only too true this keeps them busy enough.

"Moreover, it is essential that the medical profession as a whole develop a new attitude toward each patient—(a) as an individual with a chief complaint, and (b) as a person to be 'screened' for unsuspected chronic diseases. In his time-honored role as healer, the physician must listen intently to the chief complaint of the sufferer and take whatever steps, historical, physical or laboratory, required to arrive at a proper diagnosis."

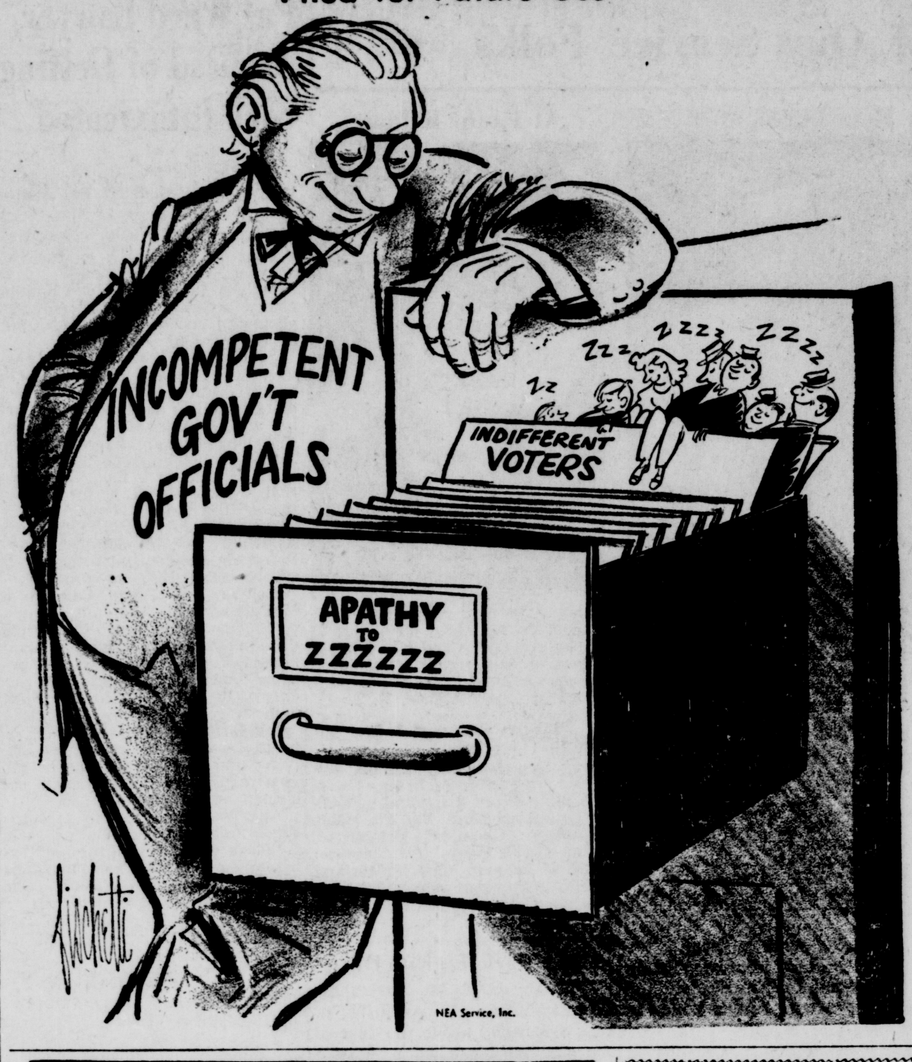

We are all aware of the willingness of life insurance companies to give free medical examinations to their policyholders at regular intervals, not only to correct present ailments or defects but to try to detect any condition or tendency toward future ailments, especially heart, bloodvessel, and kidney ailments. While getting ahead of preventable ailments is good business to the companies, it is even better business for the policyholder as good health is life's greatest human asset.

DREW PEARSON ON The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Washington—During the latter years of his life, Sen. Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan, Republican, was troubled with severe headaches from the brain tumor which eventually brought his death.

Dropping in to see him late one afternoon, it was obvious Vandenberg was not feeling well and I remarked on it. He replied:

"These headaches aren't half as bad as those given me by some of my Republican colleagues in the Senate."

Vandenberg was then in the middle of his fight to put across appropriations for the Marshall Plan, and went on to explain that almost every night Republican isolationist senators were meeting privately to hatch their strategy against him. These Senators he named as Jenner of Indiana, Kem of Missouri, Watkins of Utah, McCarthy of Wisconsin, Ecton of Montana, Cain of Washington, and Bricker of Ohio.

Vandenberg, who was cooperating with the Democrats on foreign policy in the same way I described earlier Republican Secretaries of State Frank B. Kellogg and Henry L. Stimson as cooperating with Democratic senators, finally won the Marshall Plan battle.

And in recognition of that service, Vandenberg's close friend, Paul Hoffman, a Republican and then head of Studebaker, was made top Marshall Plan administrator. It was a wise choice.

No factor played a greater part in stopping the march of communism in western Europe than the Marshall Plan. And I can say this as one who has been to Europe many times before and since the Marshall Plan, who helped end the paralyzing shipping strike at Le Havre with a load of Friendship Train food in the dark winter of 1947, who toured through railroad stations pock-marked with bullets from Communist rioting, and paraded through streets carrying American food before crowds which only a short time before had cheered the Communists.

For this stopping of communism, Vandenberg, Hoffman, and the authors of the Marshall Plan deserve great credit.

Paul Hoffman left the Marshall Plan to join the Ford Foundation and to head up the Citizens for Eisenhower Committee. Believeing that Eisenhower presented the best chance of retaining an even-keeled, non-partisan foreign policy, Hoffman was instrumental in getting the general nominated.

Since then, and since Eisenhower has embraced those same senators who caused Vandenberg headaches, Hoffman has been strangely silent.

So also has Gen. Omar Bradley, who stormed the Normandy beachheads and, along with General Patton, bore the brunt of the advance through France and Germany. Once strong for Ike, Bradley has changed his mind.

Eisenhower, of course, is taking a calculated risk. He is risking a savage partisan attack on foreign policy, both in Korea and Europe, on the theory that after he wins he can crack the whip over the isolationist senators of his own party and keep them in line.

This will probably work for the first two years. But after the patronage runs out, after the jobs are filled, then the Maverick isolationists of the GOP will be just as difficult for Eisenhower as they were for Vandenberg.

By and large history has shown, as Frank B. Kellogg and Henry L. Stimson so well knew, that Republican presidents get better cooperation from Democratic senators than they get from their own party.

Sen. Charles Tobey of New Hampshire, the TV crime crusader, has decided not to take a walk on Eisenhower. But he passed out word in regard to any campaigning that he is "awfully busy."....Paul Walter, ex-campaign manager for Taft, is making an emergency tour of key cities to pep up the GOP operation. Walter did a terrific job for Taft before the convention....Probably the only woman who has two Senate candidates as brothers-in-law is Mrs. Jerry Wadsworth, wife of the deputy civil defense administrator. One brother-in-law is Stuart Symington, Democratic candidate for the Senate in Missouri; the other Archibald Alexander, Democratic candidate for the Senate in New Jersey. Symington, who did a bang-up job as RFC administrator, seems sure to win. Alexander, who did an equally bang-up job as undersecretary of the army, is a long-shot. An A-1 man, he isn't much of a campaign speaker....Sen. Bill Benton's offer in Connecticut to give a public TV audition to anyone switching from Stevenson to Eisenhower hasn't had any takers in that state....Sen. Wayne Morse will spend the remaining time before Election Day to campaign for Stevenson in New York, Connecticut and Massachusetts.

Today in Washington

Eisenhower Is Seen as Winner Over Stevenson on Analysis of National Trend

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Oct. 31 — This writer has made a prediction on each of the last presidential elections and has been right seven times and wrong twice. The prediction made today—that Eisenhower will win—is based on the same approach and the same formula that has been used in these dispatches on previous election contests.

Eisenhower can win even without the combined electoral votes of New York, Illinois and California, though this writer expects him to carry two and possibly all three of them.

The formula used here is based on an analysis of what states have special situations, and what states are likely to follow a national pattern, and from these an electoral table is presented which gives the minimum that the successful candidate may be expected to get.

Where several states are "close" and are considered a "toss-up," the test is a normal situation—similar to the previous presidential elections—or whether the fact that a state is "close" means an abnormal situation.

Thus, based on elections in recent years, Massachusetts, Minnesota and Rhode Island should not be "close" at all, but should be heavily Democratic. In fact, the Democrats in Massachusetts in 1948 gained over their 1944 percentage in a marked deviation upward from the donwward national curve. This time, however, there are Democratic losses apparent in both Massachusetts and Rhode Island, where there is a substantial defection of Catholics on the anti-Communist issue. This means that both states are "special situations"—just as is New York where there will be an unusually heavy vote of Jewish and Negro groups on the Democratic side in New York city.

One gets the national pattern outside of New York city and Boston, there isn't any doubt that even in a state like Missouri, which is normally heavy on the Democratic side, there is a noticeable upsurge of Eisenhower strength. Why should Minnesota be "close"? And why should Iowa be definitely turning from its Democratic vote of four years ago, unless a tide in favor of change is running through the entire west and Pacific coast states where "special situations" like those in New York city and Boston do not occur? To anyone familiar with political tides—such as the protest now running against the Truman administration—this is a truly significant development.

Following are the states which this writer surely expects to go for Eisenhower:

California (32), Colorado (6), Connecticut (8), Delaware (3), Idaho (4), Illinois (27), Indiana (13), Iowa (10), Kansas (8), Maine (5), Maryland (9), Michigan (20), Montana (4), Nebraska (6), Nevada (3), New Hampshire (4), New Jersey (16), North Dakota (4), Ohio (25), Oregon (6), Pennsylvania (32), South Dakota (4), Vermont (3), Virginia (12), Wisconsin (12), and Wyoming (3)—a total of 279 electoral votes. Only 266 are necessary to win.

But the above is presenteed as a minimum table and not a maximum. While this writer expects the actual electoral table for Eisenhower to be in excess of 279, the vote margins in the individual states, as they turn from their 1948 Democratic majority to a Republican majority this year, will be narrow. For it takes, theoretically, only the vote of a single citizen to make a majority in a state and cause the entire electoral vote of that state to be cast for the side with a one-vote majority.

Now it should be observed that New York state, with its 45 votes, is not included in the above minimum electoral table. In fact, without adding New York, one can also subtract California's 32 and Illinios' 27, and the minimum table comes down to 220, and then, in order to get 266, it would be necessary for Ike to pick up the difference between 220 and 266, which is 46 votes. This is equivalent to saying that Eisenhower could lose the three big states—New York and Illinois and California—and still win, provided he picks up 46 electoral votes elsewhere in the country.

Looking to the states with "special situations"—like those with a "civil rights" or strong anti-Communist issue—there are Florida (10), Massachusetts (16), and Tennessee (11), where defections from the regular Democratic party are substantial. These make up 37. With the addition of either Minnesota's 11, or Washington's 9, this adds up to 46 or 48. There is a good chance of either Minnesota or Washington turning over this year to Eisenhower, because both states would seem to be largely unaffected by "special situations" and probably will follow the national pattern of the midwestern or Pacific coast states.

Summing up, the "ratio of doubt" in state after state favors Eisenhower on the basis of the apparent dimunition of the Democratic strength in many states from coast to coast. Even in the "special situation" states, Republican gains of material size are being conceded by the Democrats.

Looking at the picture from the Stevenson side, the "ratio of doubt" is against him. There are too many states in which the Democratic nominee has only an "outside chance" or no better than an "even chance" to do as well as Truman did four years ago. While the minority groups will go for Stevenson, they voted Democratic in 1948 also. The labor-union vote was heavy then for Truman, too, but this is offset now, to an appreciable extent, by the number of households where the high cost of living or the fear of endless war in Korea is shifting votes that normally would be Democratic.

This prediction assumes, of course, that the precinct workers on both sides will try as hard on Election Day to get out the registered vote as they did in 1940, when Willkie was running. There is every indication that they will.

This correspondent has always made his predictions without regard to his own personal choice. Thus, this writer predicted a victory for FDR three out of four times, though never once favoring his election from the days of 1932. This was because Mr. Roosevelt surrendered to the isolationist side and argued against American entry into the League of Nations, which this writer has always favored. So it isn't a case of which candidate is the better man or which one ought to be elected, but which one, based on all the available evidence and judgment of political trends, will be elected—and it looks certain for Eisenhower.

BABSON on BUSINESS

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 31—If Christmas had come last spring or summer when the steel strike was starting, it would have been a poor Christmas for manufacturers, merchants and the rest of us. Early in 1952, the public stopped buying. Television sets, washing machines, and other appliances were filling up storehouses; while the companies making these were discharging workers.

A trip through our Great Central West makes me believe the above situation is changing. Wise buyers are making their Christmas purchases now, — especially for the so-called hard goods, such as washing machines, refrigerators and appliances. Even automobiles appear to be selling well in most sections. They are now being produced at an annual rate of nearly 5,000,000 because the industry is catching up after the steel strike. However, for the same reason, full-year 1952 will not show such a total.

Probably most textiles can be bought for less now than they can in December. Sheets, blankets, and other household goods will become scarcer as Christmas approaches, although there will be the customary "sales" in January. Carpets, including wool and the blended types, are moving well now even though they were a drag on the market early this year.

New Houses in Demand

New houses, the sale of which fell off badly during the summer, are again in demand due to the relaxation of credit controls. There is, however, only little demand for large houses — though they are much better built. When well located, with land available for building small new houses, many of these larger old places are better buys than small ones. This is especially true where zoning permits larger houses to be used by two families.

Rents are sure to advance during 1953. This may once again make it profitable to build houses to rent. People have money; and they first want a home. Next, a television set! These are again moving and it is better to buy one either now or wait until after Christmas. They will be higher in December than just now.

What About Prices in General?

Wholesole prices have been declining for some time, and now consumer prices are moving very slightly lower. The Labor Department living cost index for September shaded off to 190.8 per cent of the 1935-39 average. That was against 191.1 in August. The immediate prospect is for foods, rents, utilities, and miscellaneous consumer goods and services to show little further change. Apparel may move down slightly. House furnishings will be unchanged. All in all, little change in the consumer price-index is expected for the rest of the year. Food prices, on the average, appear to be declining a bit. The general uptrend in the cost-of-living seems to have been broken. Any change between now and the end of the year probably will be too moderate to be felt by the average family.

The above outlook is due to full employment in all but a very few sections. Contractors are again seeking workers; the utilities are employing more people; and most people willing to work can get a

REPUBLICAN CONGRESS

The only sure way to guarantee cleaning up the mess in Washington is by the election of General Eisenhower and Senator Nixon and a Republican Congress. In order to achieve the necessary cleanup in the Federal government, the general must have a Republican Congress to produce a workable team for carrying out the party's platform.

If it is to work effectively in restoring to Washington a high standard of constitutional government that has been unknown during the Truman regime, the new administration will need a closely-knitted, harmonious organization. The campaign for the standard-bearers of the Republican Party should be tied in with an equally vigorous effort to elect Republican senators and representatives, pledged to support the administration program of ending the waste, extravagance and corruption in the nation's capital.

In this senatorial district, Irving M. Ives is the Republican candidate for the office of the United States Senator and in this congressional district, J. Ernest Wharton is the Republican candidate for representative in Congress.

OFFICERS' VOTING

"My mother was a Democrat, my father a Republican. I am an Episcopalian. I have never voted and shall not do so this fall." Thus General George C. Marshall revealed to reporters that he was following an old army custom. Cadets at Virginia Military Institute, which Marshall attended, and at West Point, learn that their duty is to obey their commander-in-chief, the President, regardless of party. This rule may inculcate an indifference to politics which ends in keeping officers away from the polls.

An added reason for abstention is that changes of post often prevent an officer from striking roots anywhere. Often they do not stay in any one place long enough to become eligible to vote.

This habit of army officers is fairly well known. Yet General Marshall hardly helped the cause of good citizenship by advertising his habitual abstention. With an important election in the offing and a widespread drive to get out a large vote, Marshall's statement could have been spared, except as it emphasizes the fact that something should be done to give all servicemen, high or low, their rightful chance to express their wishes at the polls.

OUR SAVINGS NEED NEW PROTECTION

Since the end of 1945 the living-cost index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics has risen 62 points. This inflationary spiral has swept away 32 per cent of the value of the $142,700,000,000 held as savings by the American people at that date.

According to figures of the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company, that drastic cut is 20 times the loss suffered by U. S. bank depositors in all the bank failures the country has had since the end of the Civil War. In money terms, the cut is $45,700,000,000.

Thus inflation has each year taken a toll averaging five per cent from all our money in whatever form — pay checks, pensions, savings bonds, bank accounts.

The loss obviously is staggering and it is personal—felt by every one of us. And it points a lesson about the state of our home-front affairs.

There was a time when one of the most important things to an average man was having the assurance that the money he had in the bank was safe against the bank's failure. He has gained that protection.

But today that isn't enough. When the inroads of inflation in a year's time can outmatch dozens of bank failures, it is obvious that the ordinary citizen needs a new kind of protection now. And he isn't getting it.

This is a problem uppermost in the minds of many voters and millions will cast their ballot for General Eisenhower, who will do most about it.

There are many dangers in kicking a man when he is down. One of them is what he will do when he gets back up.

'These Days'

COMMUNISTS AT THE U.N.

First the Federal Grand Jury in New York and then the McCarran Committee have brought to light the cell of American Communists who have been using the United Nations as a base and sanctuary. Credit for this magnificent job of investigation must go to Roy N. Cohen of the Department of Justice and Robert Morris of the McCarran Committee.

The vital question is: when is an American not an American while continuing to enjoy all the privileges and benefits of an American?

This is a tough one to answer. These hearings really started in May when the McCarran Committee called before it David Weintraub, director of Economic Stability and Development of the United Nations, a high official. The committee counsel felt that it "became apparent that Mr. Weintraub had caused to be employed by the United Nations, certain individuals." Mr. Weintraub had been in the State Department. The committee in May was investigating the numerous activities of Owen Lattimore and it appears that Lattimore was recommended by Weintraub to a United Nations job having to do with economic assistance for Afghanistan. Yet the fact is that Lattimore is an expert neither on economics nor Afghanistan. This is Weintraub's testimony on the subject:

"Mr. Sourwine. Had anyone suggested to you that he (Lattimore) would be suitable . . . for a job of this kind or for employment by the United Nations?

"Mr. Weintraub: I don't recollect anyone having suggested that to me.

"Mr. Sourwine. You just chose his name yourself?

"Mr. Weintraub: I think so.

"Mr. Sourwine. Did you know him as an expert in Afghanistan matters?

"Mr. Weintraub. No; I knew of him only as an expert in general Far-Eastern affairs.

"Mr. Sourwine. Did you know whether he had written anything about Afghanistan?

"Mr. Weintraub. No; I did not.

"Mr. Sourwine. Did you know whether he had been in Afghanistan?

"Mr. Weintraub. No; I did not.

"Mr. Sourwine. Do you consider Afghanistan a Far-Eastern nation?

"Mr. Weintraub. Technically Afghanistan is classified as a Middle-Eastern country."

Yet, Weintraub believed that Lattimore is an expert on Afghanistan because he had been to Mongolia. If you look at a map, you will see how far-fetched that is. Also there is no linguistic relationship. Mr. Weintraub did not come off so well with that one and undoubtedly it opened the broad question as to who Weintraub is and whence derived his power.

David Weintraub came to the United States in 1921 at the age of 17 from Austrian Poland. He was naturalized in 1926. He studied at the City College of New York and Columbia University and was employed by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of which Sidney Hillman was the head. He was also employed by the National Bureau of Economic Research under Professor Leo Wolman of Columbia University. Wolman recommended Weintraub to Harry Hopkins who employed him in the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. His first international job was with UNRRA.

However, he had also been employed by the War Production Board and the State Department. It was from UNRRA that he went to the United Nations. In the United Nations, Weintraub is in charge of economic planning for the entire world. With regard to that, his views are:

"Mr. Sourwine. Did you ever take the position that the Point Four program should be administered by an international organization and not by the United States?

"Mr. Weintraub. Yes.

"Mr. Sourwine. Would you care to expand on that? You might feel that in justice to yourself you should do so.

"Mr. Weintraub. Yes. The program in question is a program of technical assistance for the economic development of underdeveloped countries. That question had been under discussion in the United Nations for years—meaning, by that, the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council and various committees and commissions—and along with others I felt that that kind of activity is peculiarly suited for an international organization so as to put underdeveloped countries in a position of receiving economic assistance of that character from an organization of their own rather than receiving it on a bilateral basis from individual governments.

"I agree with the position, and I am sure I must have said so to many people at various times."

In the present line of investigation, the McCarran Committee is seeking apparently to discover why so large a cell of American Communists exists in the United Nations. The gist of David Weintraub's testimony has been a flat denial that he is the person responsible. In fact, he has denied on interrogation that he recommended specified persons for employment. Thus far, no testimony had been adduced to the contrary. Nevertheless, it is important to note David Weintraub's story because of those questioned by the committee are in his department of the United Nations.

PREVENTING AILMENTS IN THE ELDERLY

"It is well known by lawyers, plumbers, garage mechanics, and other purveyors of personal services that the public is more ready to make an economic sacrifice to get out of trouble than to stay out.

In medicine this vagary of human nature is demonstrated by the rather adequate remuneration for a routine appendectomy as compared with that of a diagnostic survey (complete physical examination including laboratory and other tests) which certainly takes longer and probably demands at least an equal degree of professional ability." I am quoting Dr. Benjamin V. White, Hartford, Attending Physician, Hospital for Chronic Illness, Rocky Hill, Conn., in Geriatrics.

Dr. White has in mind the importance of preparing the middle-aged and elderly to be reasonably free of preventable ailments in the days to come by giving them a thorough examination before they reach old age. Eisenhower Is Seen as Winner Over Stevenson on Analysis of National Trend

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Oct. 31 — This writer has made a prediction on each of the last presidential elections and has been right seven times and wrong twice. The prediction made today—that Eisenhower will win—is based on the same approach and the same formula that has been used in these dispatches on previous election contests.

Eisenhower can win even without the combined electoral votes of New York, Illinois and California, though this writer expects him to carry two and possibly all three of them.

The formula used here is based on an analysis of what states have special situations, and what states are likely to follow a national pattern, and from these an electoral table is presented which gives the minimum that the successful candidate may be expected to get.

Where several states are "close" and are considered a "toss-up," the test is a normal situation—similar to the previous presidential elections—or whether the fact that a state is "close" means an abnormal situation.

Thus, based on elections in recent years, Massachusetts, Minnesota and Rhode Island should not be "close" at all, but should be heavily Democratic. In fact, the Democrats in Massachusetts in 1948 gained over their 1944 percentage in a marked deviation upward from the donwward national curve. This time, however, there are Democratic losses apparent in both Massachusetts and Rhode Island, where there is a substantial defection of Catholics on the anti-Communist issue. This means that both states are "special situations"—just as is New York where there will be an unusually heavy vote of Jewish and Negro groups on the Democratic side in New York city.

One gets the national pattern outside of New York city and Boston, there isn't any doubt that even in a state like Missouri, which is normally heavy on the Democratic side, there is a noticeable upsurge of Eisenhower strength. Why should Minnesota be "close"? And why should Iowa be definitely turning from its Democratic vote of four years ago, unless a tide in favor of change is running through the entire west and Pacific coast states where "special situations" like those in New York city and Boston do not occur? To anyone familiar with political tides—such as the protest now running against the Truman administration—this is a truly significant development.

Following are the states which this writer surely expects to go for Eisenhower:

California (32), Colorado (6), Connecticut (8), Delaware (3), Idaho (4), Illinois (27), Indiana (13), Iowa (10), Kansas (8), Maine (5), Maryland (9), Michigan (20), Montana (4), Nebraska (6), Nevada (3), New Hampshire (4), New Jersey (16), North Dakota (4), Ohio (25), Oregon (6), Pennsylvania (32), South Dakota (4), Vermont (3), Virginia (12), Wisconsin (12), and Wyoming (3)—a total of 279 electoral votes. Only 266 are necessary to win.

But the above is presenteed as a minimum table and not a maximum. While this writer expects the actual electoral table for Eisenhower to be in excess of 279, the vote margins in the individual states, as they turn from their 1948 Democratic majority to a Republican majority this year, will be narrow. For it takes, theoretically, only the vote of a single citizen to make a majority in a state and cause the entire electoral vote of that state to be cast for the side with a one-vote majority.

Now it should be observed that New York state, with its 45 votes, is not included in the above minimum electoral table. In fact, without adding New York, one can also subtract California's 32 and Illinios' 27, and the minimum table comes down to 220, and then, in order to get 266, it would be necessary for Ike to pick up the difference between 220 and 266, which is 46 votes. This is equivalent to saying that Eisenhower could lose the three big states—New York and Illinois and California—and still win, provided he picks up 46 electoral votes elsewhere in the country.

Looking to the states with "special situations"—like those with a "civil rights" or strong anti-Communist issue—there are Florida (10), Massachusetts (16), and Tennessee (11), where defections from the regular Democratic party are substantial. These make up 37. With the addition of either Minnesota's 11, or Washington's 9, this adds up to 46 or 48. There is a good chance of either Minnesota or Washington turning over this year to Eisenhower, because both states would seem to be largely unaffected by "special situations" and probably will follow the national pattern of the midwestern or Pacific coast states.

Summing up, the "ratio of doubt" in state after state favors Eisenhower on the basis of the apparent dimunition of the Democratic strength in many states from coast to coast. Even in the "special situation" states, Republican gains of material size are being conceded by the Democrats.

Looking at the picture from the Stevenson side, the "ratio of doubt" is against him. There are too many states in which the Democratic nominee has only an "outside chance" or no better than an "even chance" to do as well as Truman did four years ago. While the minority groups will go for Stevenson, they voted Democratic in 1948 also. The labor-union vote was heavy then for Truman, too, but this is offset now, to an appreciable extent, by the number of households where the high cost of living or the fear of endless war in Korea is shifting votes that normally would be Democratic.

This prediction assumes, of course, that the precinct workers on both sides will try as hard on Election Day to get out the registered vote as they did in 1940, when Willkie was running. There is every indication that they will.

This correspondent has always made his predictions without regard to his own personal choice. Thus, this writer predicted a victory for FDR three out of four times, though never once favoring his election from the days of 1932. This was because Mr. Roosevelt surrendered to the isolationist side and argued against American entry into the League of Nations, which this writer has always favored. So it isn't a case of which candidate is the better man or which one ought to be elected, but which one, based on all the available evidence and judgment of political trends, will be elected—and it looks certain for Eisenhower.

BABSON on BUSINESS

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 31—If Christmas had come last spring or summer when the steel strike was starting, it would have been a poor Christmas for manufacturers, merchants and the rest of us. Early in 1952, the public stopped buying. Television sets, washing machines, and other appliances were filling up storehouses; while the companies making these were discharging workers.

A trip through our Great Central West makes me believe the above situation is changing. Wise buyers are making their Christmas purchases now, — especially for the so-called hard goods, such as washing machines, refrigerators and appliances. Even automobiles appear to be selling well in most sections. They are now being produced at an annual rate of nearly 5,000,000 because the industry is catching up after the steel strike. However, for the same reason, full-year 1952 will not show such a total.

Probably most textiles can be bought for less now than they can in December. Sheets, blankets, and other household goods will become scarcer as Christmas approaches, although there will be the customary "sales" in January. Carpets, including wool and the blended types, are moving well now even though they were a drag on the market early this year.

New Houses in Demand

New houses, the sale of which fell off badly during the summer, are again in demand due to the relaxation of credit controls. There is, however, only little demand for large houses — though they are much better built. When well located, with land available for building small new houses, many of these larger old places are better buys than small ones. This is especially true where zoning permits larger houses to be used by two families.

Rents are sure to advance during 1953. This may once again make it profitable to build houses to rent. People have money; and they first want a home. Next, a television set! These are again moving and it is better to buy one either now or wait until after Christmas. They will be higher in December than just now.

What About Prices in General?

Wholesale prices have been declining for some time, and now consumer prices are moving very slightly lower. The Labor Department living cost index for September shaded off to 190.8 per cent of the 1935-39 average. That was against 191.1 in August. The immediate prospect is for foods, rents, utilities, and miscellaneous consumer goods and services to show little further change. Apparel may move down slightly. House furnishings will be unchanged. All in all, little change in the consumer price-index is expected for the rest of the year. Food prices, on the average, appear to be declining a bit. The general uptrend in the cost-of-living seems to have been broken. Any change between now and the end of the year probably will be too moderate to be felt by the average family.

The above outlook is due to full employment in all but a very few sections. Contractors are again seeking workers; the utilities are employing more people; and most people willing to work can get a

Gertrude Kopaskie Of Wallkill Named First Grange Girl

Miss Gertrude Kopaskie, 17, of Wallkill brought honor to Ulster county when she was cited as the outstanding Grange girl in the state at last night's session of the 80th annual convention of the New York State Grange in Saratoga Springs.

William M. Schneider, Jr., 21, of Elbridge, Onondaga county, shared honors with Miss Kopaskie, when he was voted the outstanding Grange boy.

Student at New Paltz

Schneider farms in partnership with his father, and Miss Kopaskie is a freshman at New Paltz State Teachers College.

Nine deputy Grange masters were honored for having 50 per cent or more of their county Granges participate in the contest. They included Vernon A. Barnhart, Stone Ridge, Ulster county.

About 3,000 delegates and guests are attending the meeting, which opened Tuesday and closes today. The State Grange has approximately 143,000 members.

Against Potato OPS

The farm organization yesterday called for removal of OPS ceiling prices on potatoes, and attacked the quality of ice cream produced in the state.

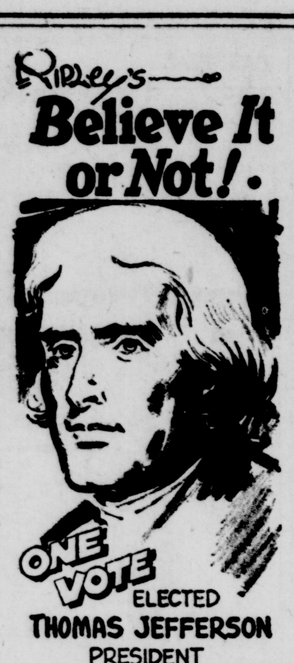

The resolution on potatoes, adopted unanimously, described the OPS ceiling as "unfair, impractical and unreasonable."

Since there is no support price for potatoes, the Grange contended "this commodity should be exempted from the provision in the present price control law which makes price ceilings possible at the parity level."

Hit Poor Ice Cream

Another resolution urged that the state raise the required butterfat content of ice cream made and sold in New York.

"Much of the manufactured ice cream offered for sale in New York state is not of good quality and * * * the present butterfat content in ice cream is below the butterfat content demanded of the manufacturer in neighboring states," the Grange contended.

Changing Tide of Electoral Vote

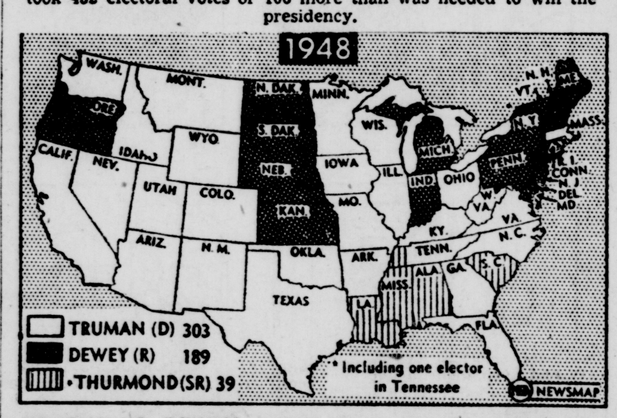

The Newscharts below show how the electoral vote has been cast following the last three presidential elections, and how important it is for a party to capture the actual majority vote of "key" states—i.e., those with the largest electoral vote.

THIRD-TERM BATTLE—The GOP thought they had a winner in 1940 as Wendell Willkie attempted to stop Franklin Roosevelt's third-term aspirations. Although Willkie received more popular votes than any other previous GOP candidate, he couldn't dent the states with large electoral votes. Above Newschart shows states carried by both presidential aspirants along with total electoral votes for each candidate.

WAR YEAR ELECTION—Newschart shows electoral vote during the 1944 election. Once again the Democrats with Franklin Roosevelt showed they were the champion vote-getters and walked away with the election. Thomas Dewey, the Republican candidate, picked up 22 million votes, but only got 99 electoral votes, while Roosevelt took 432 electoral votes or 166 more than was needed to win the presidency.

TRUMAN VS. DEWEY—In 1948, despite the split in the Democratic party, Truman still won enough of the key states to get 303 electoral votes and best favored Tom Dewey. Newschart shows how the electoral votes were split among the two major political parties and the rebellious States Righters who took 39 electoral votes in the "Solid South."

Pennsylvania May

better than most people think in Philadelphia where we lost the city administration last year. I won't say we'll win in Philadelphia. But the rest of the state is solid. Korea and communism are the big issues. The women, especially, are for Eisenhower." Philadelphia City Chairman William J. Hamilton adds "I can feel the Eisenhower drive rolling, here and everywhere. There is no doubt in my mind we'll carry the state."

Democrat — Mayor David L. Lawrence of Pittsburgh, veteran Democratic national committeeman: "Stevenson will win. We lost the state by only 149,000 four years ago, when Truman got only 6,700 majority in Philadelphia. We'll do a lot better there on Tuesday. Labor is united behind the Democratic ticket for the first time. John L. Lewis' endorsement and the United Mine Workers backing, will help us a lot in both the anthracite and bituminous areas. Pittsburgh and Allegheny county will be as good or better than the 73,000 Democratic lead in 1948. And Stevenson has great appeal for the real independents." Philadelphia City Chairman James A. Finnegan adds "we'll win Philadelphia by 125-150,00. I know that sounds big but the situation is a great deal better here than 1948. The Republican organization morale is bad; they're split up in their private feud." The visible key to the result lies in the votes of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. Even Democratic leaders agree that unless they can roll up a lead in both cities prospects are dim. Both use voting machines, and their results should be known well before midnight. But 60 per cent of the state's 8,421 voting districts still use paper ballots and their count will be slower.

The U. S. Senate race features Republican incumbent Edward Martin, a 72-year-old former governor, seeking a second term. His opponent is former U. S. District Judge Guy K. Bard, 57, a lawyer and farmer.

Here are some of the state's vital statistics:

Registration: 3,128,773 Republicans, 2,137,490 Democrats; 74,673 minor parties and non-partisan. The former registration record was 5,104,710 in 1940.

1948 result: Dewey, 1,902,197; Truman 1,752,426; Henry A. Wallace, 55,161.

Nearly 40 per cent of Pennsylvania's total vote is concentrated in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh (including surrounding Allegheny county.)

Three Minute Interlude

Binghamton, N. Y. (AP) — A three-minute parking zone has been set up here on Collier street. In passing the ordinance, the City Council did not say what you were supposed to do with the three minutes, but it will cost you one cent in the parking meter.

You can always pick out the husband of the woman whose last-minute, excited conversation delays people when they're trying to go home from a party. He's the man who's been standing alone by the front door for the last hour with his hat on.

Mrs. Clark, 46, Is Held as Arsonist In Fire at Tavern

Middletown, Oct. 31 (AP)—Mrs. Georgia Clark, 46, poured gasoline over the floor of a tavern she operated, police said, and set it ablaze just as deputy sheriffs arrived to evict her yesterday.

The fire destroyed the first floor of the two-story frame building, including the kitchen, dining room and bar room before three fire companies arrived and got the flames under control.

New York State Police gave this account:

Deputy Sheriffs Louis D'Amico and Fred Downsbrough arrived at the place, just south of Middletown, at 2:30 p. m., to evict her for non-payment of rent to her half-brother, George Davidson of (61-16 Laurel Hill Blvd.) Woodside, Queens.

Were to Execute Judgment

The sheriff's men also came to execute a judgment of $5,000 against her for rent owed Davidson and to sell the tavern's fixtures, which she owned, to satisfy the claim.

"Don't come in here—I've just set fire to the place!" she cried to the deputies as they arrived.

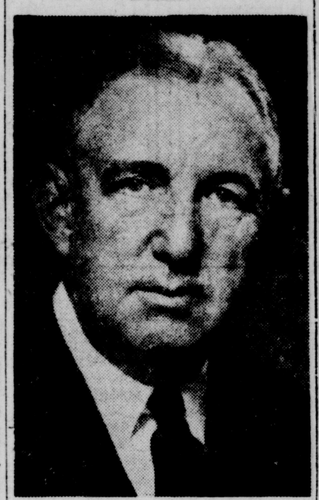

They opened the door and fell back before a blast of flame.

The officials called the fire department and state police arrested Mrs. Clark on a charge of third degree arson.

She lived in the floor above the tavern, which he operated for six years, with her 12-year-old daughter.

Later, Mrs. Clark was arraigned before Justice of the Peace August Uhling and waived examination. She made no application for bail and was held in Orange County Jail in Goshen.

The churches of the New York Area have accepted the responsibility of a new dormitory to provide additional housing for students preparing themselves for the ministry. The addresses of the evening will be related to the Drew Advance program of Methodism.

Civil Service Exam

The U. S. Civil Service Commission today announced examinations for veterinarian, trainee, for work with the Bureau of Animal Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, at locations throughout the country. Positions pay $3,410 a year. Students who expect to complete their courses by June 30, 1953, may apply. Further information including instructions on applying may be secured from the commission's local secretary, William P. Barry, located at the main post office, this city.

Shells from the West Coast found in ancient New Mexican Indian ruins prove that pre-Columbian people had a brisk trade in such goods.

South opened today's bidding with two no-trump. This bid shows a count of 22 to 24 points, balanced distribution, and a sure stopper in each of the four suits.

North is supposed to proceed on to game if he has 4 points or more. In this case North has exactly 4 points and therefore raises to three no-trump.

This game contract would be made against average defense. Let's see how it would go.

East wins the first trick with the ace of spades and returns the queen of spades, being permitted to win that trick also.

South must win the third spade trick and must go after the clubs in order to have any play for his contract. South is in luck because East has the ace of clubs. East cannot lead another spade, and South therefore is able to win the rest of the tricks.

First-class defense would defeat this contract. At the first trick East should nonchalantly play the queen of spades instead of the ace. South must win this trick with the king, since for all he can tell West has the ace of spades and this is his only chance to win a trick in the suit.

The effect of this defensive maneuver is to prevent South from holding up his king of spades until the third round of the suit.

South must still go after the clubs to have any chance for his contract. East takes the ace of clubs, cashes the ace of spades, and leads his remaining spade. West's long suit then defeats the contract.

In spite of the fact that three no-trump can be defeated, an expert would want to bid it. After all, how often do you encounter the killing opening lead and the best possible defense?

Work on Project

Edward J. Cragan, of Pine street, who had worked for King, Rice & Ganey, the contractor, who had built the tunnel.

Cragan's memory and helpful information, said Hallinan, saved the city and the contractor for the shaft work, considerable trouble, and the shafts were sunk directly to the tunnel which at that point is 86 feet under the street.

Sewage flows through the tunnel in an open sluiceway at its bottom, but in the section from Elizabeth street to Gilead street, improved under the new project, the sluiceway carrying sanitary sewage has been covered, and the rest of the spacious tunnel will carry the storm water flow.

Cost $55,346.60

The new project cost the city $55,346.60. Of this $12,376 was for the sinking of the two shafts and the rest was for the tunnel and other sewer line work done by James Berardi, local contractor.

The recent project has many other interesting phases which will be dealt with here after an account of the explosion in a shack outside of the tunnel near shaft 3, between Marius street and Greenkill avenue in 1910.

50 Pounds Explode

Accounts of the mishap in the Freeman after the explosion and following a lawsuit for damages later, indicated that about 50 pounds of dynamite in two cases exploded in a shack where the explosives were prepared for use in the tunnel. A witness at the damage suit indicated the blast was caused by a fire in some waste.

The dynamite exploded shortly before 6 p. m., on Saturday, Nov. 19, 1910, and an account of the mishap in the Freeman of Monday, Nov. 21, said the detonation caused a shock throughout the city resembling an earthquake.

Homes in the area were fewer and more scattered than they are today, but the sudden violence of the explosion caused near panic in some of them, and several persons narrowly escaped serious injury.

Lacey House Damaged

Most seriously damaged was the house of Arthur T. Lacey on Washington avenue less than 200 feet from the shack. Lacey, who was employed by the Atherton Coal Co., was still at work and his wife, Mary L. Lacey, was also away from home at the time.

The explosion moved the Lacy house from its foundation, windows on hinges were blown inward, beams were pushed through plaster, all window panes were broken, doors were jarred out of place, and plaster fell in every room.

Windows, doors and plastering were damaged in other area homes, and lamps were overturned in some, but no serious fires resulted.

Windows Blown Out

At Rockhurst, the home of the Rev. Dr. J. G. Van Slyke, the Freeman account said, several large plate glass windows were broken. The Dr. C. O. Sahler Sanitarium was damaged as were the homes of Frank Hostrader, August Kohler, Oscar Fischang and others.

The Fischang home was more than 300 feet away from the shack, and it was reported that windows blew in, doors flew open and dishes flew out of the cupboard. Fischang said he grabbed his baby and ran downstairs as he heard the explosion.

Frank Simpson, said the Freeman, was employed on the project and one of his jobs was to attach caps and fuses to the dynamite sticks. He was in part of the shack between 5 and 6 p. m., because the dynamite was usually sent down the shaft to the tunnel when the shifts changed at 6 p. m.

Was Burning Rapidly

The Freeman account explained: "Simpson noticed that one of the fuses, which already had been connected with the detonating cap attached to one of the sticks of dynamite, was burning quite rapidly, and he realized the danger."

"If he had been able to reach the fire and extinguish it," said the account, "the explosion probably would not have occurred, but there was a quantity of dynamite between him and the burning fuse, and to get to the burning fuse quickly might have resulted in setting off the other detonating caps that had been attached to the other sticks of the explosive."

Called to Slattery

After a quick glance at the situation, Simpson ran to the other door of the shack and called to James Slattery, "to run for his life." The two men had gone only about 50 feet when the dynamite exploded and they were knocked to the ground "with terrific force." They got up and continued running to gain a safe distance.

The shack built of wood and corrugated iron, was "scattered to bits." It had housed the shafts' engine works and was used for storage.

An alarm was sounded from Box 78 in the Sahler Sanitarium. This attracted crowds to the scene, and despite warnings by Coleman King, of the contracting firm, said The Freeman, some persons refused to stay at a safe distance away from the scene.

Workmen Felt Blast

Workmen in the tunnel, who were ready to come out at 6 p. m., felt the effects of the explosion and, sensing danger, they walked "to the opening in the hillside near Wilbur, known as Shaft 4." The Freeman said crowds visited the scene of the explosion throughout Sunday, the following day.

On May 5, 1911, a jury was drawn for trial of the action brought by Arthur T. Lacey and Mary L. Lacey, his wife, against the King, Rice & Ganey Co., to recover $6,000 for damages to the Lacey house.

Judge John G. VanEtten and Andrew J. Cook appeared for the plaintiffs and Judge A. T. Clearwater and Charles W. Walton for the contractors. A verdict of $2,150 was returned for the plaintiffs. It was indicated that other damage settlements were made out of court.

Cragan Was on Job

The length of time it took to build the tunnel, is probably best indicated by Edward Cragan, who said he worked for the contractors from Nov. 1, 1909 to Feb. 18, 1913. It extends from a point on Washington avenue between North Front street and Lucas avenue to Gilead street.

City Engineer Hallinan said the improved section serves 914 acres of the uptown area, representing 19 per cent of the city, 33 per cent of its population, or 9,900 persons. The estimated future population of the area is 14,500.

Before the tunnel was built, Hallinan said, the entire drainage uptown went to the Esopus creek. New York city decided to build the tunnel to change the flow toward the Rondout creek, rather than to build a sewage disposal plant. At present the sewage flows into the city's downtown treatment plant.

Carries Two Flows

The improved sewer line carries a sanitary sewage flow of 3.36 cubic feet a second and a storm water flow of 3.81 cubic feet a second.

The two shafts on Washington avenue, one for the sanitary and the other for the storm water sewer, are about 50 feet apart. They were finished last May, a grit chamber was built, and the 36-inch storm water sewer was started at that time.

Before workmen could enter the tunnel to start the project it was necessary to set up ventillating, lighting and communication systems, and "pinch-on" telephone units were used for the latter.

The work would have been completed this week but when the workmen neard a point about 300 feet from the end, they ran out of pipe which is shipped in from Ohio. The project is expected to be finished within the next ten days however.

Three More Voices To Answer Soviets

United Nations, Oct. 31 (AP)—Three more western voices speak out today on Korea in reply to Russian proposals that the United Nations set up a commission to settle the Korean war and supervise the war-devastated country's unification.

Australia, The Netherlands and Greece were listed to speak in the Korean debate in the General Assembly's political committee meeting this afternoon.

Britain and France already have hacked away at Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky's demand Wednesday that all prisoners of war in Korea be repatriated immediately, whether they want to return to their Communist homelands or not. U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson, who also has spoken and introduced a western-backed resolution on Korea, indicated he planned to answer Vishinsky but he was "not sure just when."

Selwyn Lloyd Speaks

Britain's chief delegate Selwyn Lloyd said yesterday the Communist demand would mean sending thousands of North Korean and Chinese prisoners back at bayonet point.

Lloyd said the Vishinsky-proposed commission was unnecessary and asked the Russian whether he was for or against forcible repatriation of prisoners, and declared:

"If we do get the answers for which I hope and expect, then it seems to me that no new commission is necessary; the matter can be speedily settled through existing machinery."

Proposes Commission

Vishinsky has proposed setting up a Korean commission of "the parties directly concerned and other states, including states not participating in the war in Korea."

This would leave the door open for Russia to step into the truce negotiations.

Western observers also viewed Vishinsky's proposal as a maneuver to get the truce talks out of the military level, possibly to move them to the UN headquarters here. The west is firmly against moving the talks from Panmunjom.

Lloyd was followed yesterday by France's Henri Hoppenot, who asked Vishinsky if he would "join us in our efforts to achieve peace in Korea" in the same way Russia had joined the allies in the war against Fascism.

job. Stenographers, typists, and other office and store help are now in great demand. The situation may be a little less optimistic after Christmas with a chance that there then may be greater-than-usual seasonal unemployment. The best way for manufacturers and merchants to help prevent this—and thus save their own skins—is to spend more on advertising and selling—but keep prices down.

How to Hold Your Job

A number of persons now employed will be let go during the first few months of 1953, barring war. Defense work will not slack off, but there usually is a general reaction after Christmas. When reducing employes, manufacturers and merchants too often go on the principle of "last employed should be the first to be let go."

The above means that readers should not now change to some other job just to temporarily get more money. Stick where you are and do better work than you have ever done. Remember that Christmas—like other good things—may have an unpleasant "hang-over." Play safe and don't be blinded by tinsel and candles.

Dividend Is Declared

Electrol Incorporated, manufacturer of aircraft and industrial hydraulic devices, Kingston, N. Y., reports for the six months' period ended September 30, 1952, net profit of $191,621, or 64 cents a common share, on net sales of $5,909,004. For the like 1951 period net was $104,696, or 36 cents a share, on net sales of $2,632,786.

"They never had it so good!"

THE order is, "Forward march"—and off they go, feet sucking against the Korean mud, every bone crying, "I'm tired!"

The order is flop and eat—and they flop and try to eat, no matter how little they like the food.

The order is, "Take hill number 63!"—and they fight forward, not ready for death, but expecting it with every splatter of bullets.

Then, in the quiet moments, one soldier will turn to another and half grin and say, "You never had it so good."

A joke—a classic Army joke—but these days it has a real bitter note to it. Because at the same time everyone is wondering and saying:

"Did it have to come to this?"

"Couldn't the shooting have been stopped before it began?"

"What's the matter with our foreign policy?"

"Why didn't the Administration see this coming?"

"Must we keep paying for their mistakes?"

"WHAT? We've never had it so good? COME INTO MY FOXHOLE AND SAY THAT!"

All right—the damage is done—and we all know what has been badly begun must be well ended.

BUT—shall we forget or forgive those who blundered? Will YOU? Do you DARE? Will you trust America's future foreign policy to those responsible for Korea? Is this official fumbling what you want for America? You know it isn't!

Homes in the area were fewer and more scattered than they are today, but the sudden violence of the explosion caused near panic in some of them, and several persons narrowly escaped serious injury.

Lacey House Damaged

Most seriously damaged was the house of Arthur T. Lacey on Washington avenue less than 200 feet from the shack. Lacey, who was employed by the Atherton Coal Co., was still at work and his wife, Mary L. Lacey, was also away from home at the time.

The explosion moved the Lacy house from its foundation, windows on hinges were blown inward, beams were pushed through plaster, all window panes were broken, doors were jarred out of place, and plaster fell in every room.

Windows, doors and plastering were damaged in other area homes, and lamps were overturned in some, but no serious fires resulted.

Windows Blown Out

At Rockhurst, the home of the Rev. Dr. J. G. Van Slyke, the Freeman account said, several large plate glass windows were broken. The Dr. C. O. Sahler Sanitarium was damaged as were the homes of Frank Hostrader, August Kohler, Oscar Fischang and others.

The Fischang home was more than 300 feet away from the shack, and it was reported that windows blew in, doors flew open and dishes flew out of the cupboard. Fischang said he grabbed his baby and ran downstairs as he heard the explosion.

Frank Simpson, said the Freeman, was employed on the project and one of his jobs was to attach caps and fuses to the dynamite sticks. He was in part of the shack between 5 and 6 p. m., because the dynamite was usually sent down the shaft to the tunnel when the shifts changed at 6 p. m.

Was Burning Rapidly

The Freeman account explained: "Simpson noticed that one of the fuses, which already had been connected with the detonating cap attached to one of the sticks of dynamite, was burning quite rapidly, and he realized the danger."

"If he had been able to reach the fire and extinguish it," said the account, "the explosion probably would not have occurred, but there was a quantity of dynamite between him and the burning fuse, and to get to the burning fuse quickly might have resulted in setting off the other detonating caps that had been attached to the other sticks of the explosive."

Called to Slattery

After a quick glance at the situation, Simpson ran to the other door of the shack and called to James Slattery, "to run for his life." The two men had gone only about 50 feet when the dynamite exploded and they were knocked to the ground "with terrific force." They got up and continued running to gain a safe distance.

The shack built of wood and corrugated iron, was "scattered to bits." It had housed the shafts' engine works and was used for storage.

An alarm was sounded from Box 78 in the Sahler Sanitarium. This attracted crowds to the scene, and despite warnings by Coleman King, of the contracting firm, said The Freeman, some persons refused to stay at a safe distance away from the scene.

Workmen Felt Blast

Workmen in the tunnel, who were ready to come out at 6 p. m., felt the effects of the explosion and, sensing danger, they walked "to the opening in the hillside near Wilbur, known as Shaft 4." The Freeman said crowds visited the scene of the explosion throughout Sunday, the following day.

On May 5, 1911, a jury was drawn for trial of the action brought by Arthur T. Lacey and Mary L. Lacey, his wife, against the King, Rice & Ganey Co., to recover $6,000 for damages to the Lacey house.

Judge John G. VanEtten and Andrew J. Cook appeared for the plaintiffs and Judge A. T. Clearwater and Charles W. Walton for the contractors. A verdict of $2,150 was returned for the plaintiffs. It was indicated that other damage settlements were made out of court.

Cragan Was on Job

The length of time it took to build the tunnel, is probably best indicated by Edward Cragan, who said he worked for the contractors from Nov. 1, 1909 to Feb. 18, 1913. It extends from a point on Washington avenue between North Front street and Lucas avenue to Gilead street.

City Engineer Hallinan said the improved section serves 914 acres of the uptown area, representing 19 per cent of the city, 33 per cent of its population, or 9,900 persons. The estimated future population of the area is 14,500.

Before the tunnel was built, Hallinan said, the entire drainage uptown went to the Esopus creek. New York city decided to build the tunnel to change the flow toward the Rondout creek, rather than to build a sewage disposal plant. At present the sewage flows into the city's downtown treatment plant.

Carries Two Flows

The improved sewer line carries a sanitary sewage flow of 3.36 cubic feet a second and a storm water flow of 3.81 cubic feet a second.

The two shafts on Washington avenue, one for the sanitary and the other for the storm water sewer, are about 50 feet apart. They were finished last May, a grit chamber was built, and the 36-inch storm water sewer was started at that time.

Before workmen could enter the tunnel to start the project it was necessary to set up ventillating, lighting and communication systems, and "pinch-on" telephone units were used for the latter.

The work would have been completed this week but when the workmen neard a point about 300 feet from the end, they ran out of pipe which is shipped in from Ohio. The project is expected to be finished within the next ten days however.

Three More Voices To Answer Soviets

United Nations, Oct. 31 (AP)—Three more western voices speak out today on Korea in reply to Russian proposals that the United Nations set up a commission to settle the Korean war and supervise the war-devastated country's unification.

Australia, The Netherlands and Greece were listed to speak in the Korean debate in the General Assembly's political committee meeting this afternoon.

Britain and France already have hacked away at Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky's demand Wednesday that all prisoners of war in Korea be repatriated immediately, whether they want to return to their Communist homelands or not. U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson, who also has spoken and introduced a western-backed resolution on Korea, indicated he planned to answer Vishinsky but he was "not sure just when."

Selwyn Lloyd Speaks

Britain's chief delegate Selwyn Lloyd said yesterday the Communist demand would mean sending thousands of North Korean and Chinese prisoners back at bayonet point.

Lloyd said the Vishinsky-proposed commission was unnecessary and asked the Russian whether he was for or against forcible repatriation of prisoners, and declared:

"If we do get the answers for which I hope and expect, then it seems to me that no new commission is necessary; the matter can be speedily settled through existing machinery."

Proposes Commission

Vishinsky has proposed setting up a Korean commission of "the parties directly concerned and other states, including states not participating in the war in Korea."

This would leave the door open for Russia to step into the truce negotiations.

Western observers also viewed Vishinsky's proposal as a maneuver to get the truce talks out of the military level, possibly to move them to the UN headquarters here. The west is firmly against moving the talks from Panmunjom.

Lloyd was followed yesterday by France's Henri Hoppenot, who asked Vishinsky if he would "join us in our efforts to achieve peace in Korea" in the same way Russia had joined the allies in the war against Fascism.

Babson . . .

job. Stenographers, typists, and other office and store help are now in great demand. The situation may be a little less optimistic after Christmas with a chance that there then may be greater-than-usual seasonal unemployment. The best way for manufacturers and merchants to help prevent this—and thus save their own skins—is to spend more on advertising and selling—but keep prices down.

How to Hold Your Job

A number of persons now employed will be let go during the first few months of 1953, barring war. Defense work will not slack off, but there usually is a general reaction after Christmas. When reducing employes, manufacturers and merchants too often go on the principle of "last employed should be the first to be let go."

The above means that readers should not now change to some other job just to temporarily get more money. Stick where you are and do better work than you have ever done. Remember that Christmas—like other good things—may have an unpleasant "hang-over." Play safe and don't be blinded by tinsel and candles.

Dividend Is Declared

Electrol Incorporated, manufacturer of aircraft and industrial hydraulic devices, Kingston, N. Y., reports for the six months' period ended September 30, 1952, net profit of $191,621, or 64 cents a common share, on net sales of $5,909,004. For the like 1951 period net was $104,696, or 36 cents a share, on net sales of $2,632,786.

"They never had it so good!"

THE order is, "Forward march"—and off they go, feet sucking against the Korean mud, every bone crying, "I'm tired!"

The order is flop and eat—and they flop and try to eat, no matter how little they like the food.

The order is, "Take hill number 63!"—and they fight forward, not ready for death, but expecting it with every splatter of bullets.

Then, in the quiet moments, one soldier will turn to another and half grin and say, "You never had it so good."

A joke—a classic Army joke—but these days it has a real bitter note to it. Because at the same time everyone is wondering and saying:

"Did it have to come to this?"

"Couldn't the shooting have been stopped before it began?"

"What's the matter with our foreign policy?"

"Why didn't the Administration see this coming?"

"Must we keep paying for their mistakes?"

"WHAT? We've never had it so good?, COME INTO MY FOXHOLE AND SAY THAT!"

All right—the damage is done—and we all know what has been badly begun must be well ended.

BUT—shall we forget or forgive those who blundered? Will YOU? Do you DARE? Will you trust America's future foreign policy to those responsible for Korea? Is this official fumbling what you want for America? You know it isn't!

Not if you value the lives of your sons. Not if you value your own life and welfare and that of your family. Not if you value the peace and prosperity of America.

No—you will want to clean house. You will want to sweep out of power and into the ash can the Administration that brought your country to this. You will run, not walk, to the polls. You will vote eagerly, glad that you can make a change. You will

To Show Children's Books at Annual Fair

New Paltz, Oct. 30—The Book Fair, an annual event sponsored by the Parent-Faculty Organization, will be held November 18-21.

The fair will provide parents and children an opportunity to examine nearly 500 titles. Books will be sold directly, it was stated. Favorites from a wide and carefully chosen collection of books for children of all age groups and interests have been selected.

Committee in charge of the fair is composed of Mrs. Robert Pyle, Mrs. Green, Mrs. Robert Lang, Miss Ruth Walker, Mrs. John Glancy and Mrs. George Langwick.

The committee released a preview of the books to be shown, suggesting that children attend the fair with their own special interests in mind.

Categories of books to be shown are listed as hobby books, classics, nature and science.

Woodworking, fishing, sewing, ballet, knitting and cook books for young hobbyists will represent the best of such guides available for young people.

Boys from 10 to 15 years will probably enjoy either the Boys Book of Model Railroading or Model Jets and Rockets for Boys.

Photographic bugs, puppet makers and stamp collectors will find interesting books that deal with their hobbies.

Young people who have pets and share the responsibility for their care may want one of the wide selection of pet books available. Among these will be the First Book of Dogs and First Book of Cats by Gladys Taber, for six to 8 year olds, or All About Dogs, Dodgs, Dogs and Nothing But Cats, Cats, Cats.

Odd Pets and Pets are Fun may be of special interests to those who have branched out beyond the usual dogs and cats. Twelve to 18 year olds may enjoy The Homemade Zoo which will be helpful as well to teachers and student teachers who are providing classroom space for a variety of pets.

Parents who have been looking forward to their children's enjoyment of books which they loved as youngsters will find many old favorites on the Book Fair shelves. Books by Robert Louis Stevenson, Rudyard Kipling, Beatrix Potter, Mark Twain, James Fenimore Cooper, Longfellow and Dickens and collections of fairy tales by Andersen and Grimm will be available.

Some parents will especially recall Wind in the Willows by Kenneth Grahame, 20,000 Leagues under the Sea by Jules Verne, Little Men and Little Women by Alcott, Rose in the Ring by Thackeray, or Lear's Book of Nonsense. Editions of Alice in Wonderland and Mother Goose will also be on hand.

Children interested in flowers and birds may like What Wild Flower Is It? by Anna Pistorius for the six to 10 year olds, or How to Know the Birds, or the First Book of Birds.

A classic and favorite treatment of the stars, Patterns in the Sky, by W. Maxwell Reed, will be available.

All Around You, about things that grow and the seasons, may interest the five to nine year olds and has excellent illustrations. Nine to 12s may like Experiments in Science or Hop, Skip and Fly, about all the creatures that do those things.

Four to seven year olds and six to nines should enjoy the photographs in Let's Go Outdoors and Let's Go to the Brook. The older 12 to 16 year olds may find Let Them Live enjoyable.

Who's Upside Down?, a funny story about a kangaroo and her adventures with gravity by Crockett Johnson, creator of Barnaby and Mr. O'Malley, will attract lots of five to 10 year olds.

Plan Mountain Climb

Munich, Germany (AP)—A German Himalayan expedition is quietly preparing here to scale the great Nanga Parbat peak as Germany again takes up the threads of its war-disrupted ventures into scientific achievement. Dr. Karl von Krauss, chairman of the society which plans to launch its first expedition in 1953, stresses that the program is one aimed at science only. In chosing the 26,653-foot-high Nanga Parbat, the Germans have picked a mountain which already has turned back the best of German Alpinists. Thus far the expedition includes nine climbers. Four previous German attempts failed to scale the peak, located where the borders of Russia, China and India meet. Last to find defeat at the hands of the towering Himalayan mountain was a party which attempted it in July, 1934.

The first postoffice in the United States was established in Boston in 1639.

Health for All

A Family Matter

When the doctor says, "It's tuberculosis," his words are like a stone dropped in a pool of water making a series of ever-widening circles. The most important circle—that closest to the patient himself—is his immediate family. Tuberculosis places special responsibilities on the family, and perhaps the heaviest is their duty to help the patient "see it through," go to the TB hospital and stay there until he is cured.

Leaving the hospital against medical advice, before the cure is complete, is one of the greatest problems in tuberculosis. A life of invalidism, even death itself, may result for the sick person. Meanwhile, he may spread the germs of tuberculosis to everyone with whom he comes in contact.

On the surface it would seem that knowledge of these facts would be enough to convince a patient that he should stay in the hospital until he is well. To understand why it is not enough in many cases, it is necessary to realize the weight of the load placed on the patient by his disease and its power to upset him emotionally and mentally.

A recent survey showed that a large proportion of patients who left the hospital against medical advice were married men, and the reasons they gave were chiefly domestic problems, the worries of a family man about wife, children, and bills. The treatment of TB requires a relatively long stay in the hospital during which the patient sees his family's standard of living threatened. The doctor cannot tell him on the day he enters how long he will have to stay. Meanwhile, he is told to rest so that the injured tissues of his body will have a chance to heal. He feels "left out." He has leisure for brooding.

In these circumstances, the least "pull" from outside the hospital may make the patient decide to leave the hospital. A small complaint in a letter from home will be magnified many times. Lack of news will cause exaggerated anxiety. Every indication of the family's attitude towards the patient has a strong effect on him.

It is vital for every member of the family of a tuberculosis patient to understand their importance to his cure. Community agencies will help them through the financial difficulties and other domestic problems. The family can help the patient by cheerful and confident acceptance of the fact that he must stay in the hospital until his cure is complete. They can keep him up to date on family news and include him in family conferences on matters which will not needlessly upset him. The patient should be able to look forward to his return home to a stable family unit.

Pack 15 Enjoys Halloween Party And Gets Awards

Witches screamed and spooks howled Wednesday evening as Cub Scout Pack 15 held its monthly pack meeting at the Comforter Hall, with a Halloween party as the feature of the evening.

Only one Cub Scout was absent as the 40 boys of Pack 15 paraded before the judges of the evening to determine who had the costume that would bring the awards to the wearer. Cub Scout Robert Gillen had the most hideous costume, Cub Scout David Gibbs sported the funniest, and Cub Scout Richard Showers, with his den chief brother Peter, was awarded the most original prize as the organ grinder and his monkey.

Each of the five dens in Pack 15 displayed a hall of horrors through which both the Cubs and parents paraded, and Den 5, Mrs. Durwood Freer, den mother, was awarded the den award for the best horror presentation.

Parents Show Interest

Parent participation in the pack meeting reached new heights as Dens 2, 4, and 5 each had 100 per cent attendance and received the honor den attendance pennant for the month.

Den 2 attained the honor of being the first den in the pack to receive achievement awards for the entire den during a one month period, and Dens 2 and 3 also had a perfect attendance record at weekly meetings for the month period.

Halloween games including the traditional ducking for apples and endeavoring to capture marshmallows suspended from strings, were a part of the evening's program arranged by Mrs. Richard Kalish, Mr. and Mrs. William Hart, and Mr. and Mrs. Rudolf Gromoll. Arthur Field decorated the hall for the party, and Den 4, Mrs. Howard Nickerson, den mother, had charge of the refreshments.

Awards Given

Awards for the various Cubs for achievements during the month were:

Den 1: Thomas DeWitt, Lion badge, gold arrow, silver arrow; Daniel Landi, Lion badge; David Gibbs, Lion badge and gold arrow.

Den 2: Karl Glotzl, Bobcat pin; John Gillen, Wolf badge; John Fabiano, Bear badge; William Brennan, Bear badge; Charles Rion, two silver arrows; Phillips Eighmey, silver arrow; Terry Kalish, gold arrow; James Connelly, silver arrow; John Gillen, denner's stripe; Charles Rion, assistant denner's stripe.

Den. 3: Keith Winne, Wolf badge; Richard Showers, Bear badge; William Niles, two silver arrows; Walter Scharpf, Lion badge and gold arrow.

Den 5: Paul Noble, Wolf badge; Bruce Freer, two silver arrows; Ferrell McElrath, two silver arrows; Walter Demskie, gold arrow and silver arrow; Jack McElrath two silver arrows; Denners' stripe to Ferrell McElrath and assistant Denner's stripe to Jack McElrath.

Boy Scout Peter Showers of Troop A received his den chief's cord as den chief of Den 5, and Boy Scout Charles Khederian of Troop 15 received his cord as extra den chief for the pack.

Meeting November 26

The regular pack flag ceremony was conducted by Cub Scouts Thomas DeWitt, Daniel Landi, and David Gibbs of Den 1.

Announcements included participation of Pack 15 in the Liberty Bell door-knob hangers distribution on Saturday morning with 300 hangers allotted to the pack. The pack meeting for next month was announced for Wednesday evening, Nov. 26, with Mr. and Mrs. James Connelly arranging the program on the theme of Faith of Our Fathers. A special film strip on the Achievement Plan will be shown to the parents at the November meeting.

Accent on YOUTH

Central Hudson enjoys working with the boys and girls of the area it serves. The Company hopes to win their friendship . . . to help teach them the value of the American private enterprise system . . . to assist them to become good citizens.

Over the past years a detailed youth program has been worked out which the Company believes fills a need in the community. Indications are that the program has won not only the support and respect of the younger generation but that it has had definite influence in promoting good education and good citizenship.

Highlights of the program are as follows:

Scholarship Program

Each spring the principal of every public and parochial high school in the area is invited to choose a junior student of outstanding ability to compete for a four-year engineering scholarship to Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. Students selected take a three-week summer indoctrination course covering all phases of public utility operation. (See pictures 6 and 9.) From each summer's group the outstanding boy is selected as the winner of the scholarship. At present: four boys are attending RPI as a result of this course. (See picture 2; Edward P. Walsh, 1951 winner, Highland High School, receives scholarship award from Central Hudson's Roland S. Child while, center, William H. Yates, school principal, and John C. Miller, right, guidance counselor, look on.)

Lamp Building Activity

Each year the Company conducts a lamp building activity. During the last program concluded in May, 1952, more than 1700 industrial arts and woodworking students in 34 area high schools participated with prizes for each school and an over-all grand prize. The Company contributes prizes and electrical equipment and boys and girls build lamps to their own original design but according to rigid specifications. (See pictures 8; lamp building Poughkeepsie Vocational Annex, and 12; Haldane Central School, Cold Spring.) (See picture 3; Central Hudson president Ernest R. Acker awards 1952 top prize to Charles Rex, Kingston High School.)

Cooking Demonstrations

Plant Visits

Students from many schools visit Central Hudson gas and electric installations each year. This plant visit program has been particularly popular with rural schools and with physics and science students of all schools. Of special interest is a gas study program conducted for a number of years. (See picture 1; children from Spackenkill Grade, Poughkeepsie, visit Danskammer Point Steam Station.) (See picture 7; a group of Poughkeepsie High School science students visit Poughkeepsie Gas Plant.)

Printed Teaching Aids

The Company has available many publications as teaching aids. From time to time contributions have been made to school libraries of materials provided by the Edison Electric Institute and the American Gas Association. (See picture 4.)

Motion Pictures

The Company maintains a constantly changing library of motion pictures for loan to schools. Most of the school children in the area see a number of films supplied by the Company during every school year. (See picture 10.)

Use of Company Facilities

The Company's main commercial offices have auditoriums which may be used for meetings of such organizations as the Girl and Boy Scouts as well as adult community groups. (See picture 5; Girl Scouts hold a council meeting in Newburgh Office auditorium.)

Speakers

A number of high schools in the Company's area have "career days" for graduating seniors. Central Hudson is always ready to provide speakers on these occasions to present the story of a utility career. The Company prides itself as being a local company manned by local people. It is hoped that local boys and girls of today will be the company of tomorrow.

Future plans call for a continuation and improvement of this program.

Four previous German attempts failed to scale the peak, located where the borders of Russia, China and India meet. Last to find defeat at the hands of the towering Himalayan mountain was a party which attempted it in July, 1934.

Health for All

A Family Matter

When the doctor says, "It's tuberculosis," his words are like a stone dropped in a pool of water making a series of ever-widening circles. The most important circle—that closest to the patient himself—is his immediate family. Tuberculosis places special responsibilities on the family, and perhaps the heaviest is their duty to help the patient "see it through," go to the TB hospital and stay there until he is cured.

Leaving the hospital against medical advice, before the cure is complete, is one of the greatest problems in tuberculosis. A life of invalidism, even death itself, may result for the sick person. Meanwhile, he may spread the germs of tuberculosis to everyone with whom he comes in contact.

On the surface it would seem that knowledge of these facts would be enough to convince a patient that he should stay in the hospital until he is well. To understand why it is not enough in many cases, it is necessary to realize the weight of the load placed on the patient by his disease and its power to upset him emotionally and mentally.

A recent survey showed that a large proportion of patients who left the hospital against medical advice were married men, and the reasons they gave were chiefly domestic problems, the worries of a family man about wife, children, and bills. The treatment of TB requires a relatively long stay in the hospital during which the patient sees his family's standard of living threatened. The doctor cannot tell him on the day he enters how long he will have to stay. Meanwhile, he is told to rest so that the injured tissues of his body will have a chance to heal. He feels "left out." He has leisure for brooding.

In these circumstances, the least "pull" from outside the hospital may make the patient decide to leave the hospital. A small complaint in a letter from home will be magnified many times. Lack of news will cause exaggerated anxiety. Every indication of the family's attitude towards the patient has a strong effect on him.

It is vital for every member of the family of a tuberculosis patient to understand their importance to his cure. Community agencies will help them through the financial difficulties and other domestic problems. The family can help the patient by cheerful and confident acceptance of the fact that he must stay in the hospital until his cure is complete. They can keep him up to date on family news and include him in family conferences on matters which will not needlessly upset him. The patient should be able to look forward to his return home to a stable family unit.

Pack 15 Enjoys Halloween Party And Gets Awards

Witches screamed and spooks howled Wednesday evening as Cub Scout Pack 15 held its monthly pack meeting at the Comforter Hall, with a Halloween party as the feature of the evening.

Only one Cub Scout was absent as the 40 boys of Pack 15 paraded before the judges of the evening to determine who had the costume that would bring the awards to the wearer. Cub Scout Robert Gillen had the most hideous costume, Cub Scout David Gibbs sported the funniest, and Cub Scout Richard Showers, with his den chief brother Peter, was awarded the most original prize as the organ grinder and his monkey.

Each of the five dens in Pack 15 displayed a hall of horrors through which both the Cubs and parents paraded, and Den 5, Mrs. Durwood Freer, den mother, was awarded the den award for the best horror presentation.

Halloween games including the traditional ducking for apples and endeavoring to capture marshmallows suspended from strings, were a part of the evening's program arranged by Mrs. Richard Kalish, Mr. and Mrs. William Hart, and Mr. and Mrs. Rudolf Gromoll. Arthur Field decorated the hall for the party, and Den 4, Mrs. Howard Nickerson, den mother, had charge of the refreshments.

Awards Given

Awards for the various Cubs for achievements during the month were:

Den 1: Thomas DeWitt, Lion badge, gold arrow, silver arrow; Daniel Landi, Lion badge; David Gibbs, Lion badge and gold arrow.

Den 2: Karl Glotzl, Bobcat pin; John Gillen, Wolf badge; John Fabiano, Bear badge; William Brennan, Bear badge; Charles Rion, two silver arrows; Phillips Eighmey, silver arrow; Terry Kalish, gold arrow; James Connelly, silver arrow; John Gillen, denner's stripe; Charles Rion, assistant denner's stripe.

Den 5: Paul Noble, Wolf badge; Bruce Freer, two silver arrows; Ferrell McElrath, two silver arrows; Walter Demskie, gold arrow and silver arrow; Jack McElrath two silver arrows; Denners' stripe to Ferrell McElrath and assistant Denner's stripe to Jack McElrath.

Meeting November 26

The regular pack flag ceremony was conducted by Cub Scouts Thomas DeWitt, Daniel Landi, and David Gibbs of Den 1.

Announcements included participation of Pack 15 in the Liberty Bell door-knob hangers distribution on Saturday morning with 300 hangers allotted to the pack. The pack meeting for next month was announced for Wednesday evening, Nov. 26, with Mr. and Mrs. James Connelly arranging the program on the theme of Faith of Our Fathers. A special film strip on the Achievement Plan will be shown to the parents at the November meeting.

DR. EDWARDS'

Accent on YOUTH

Central Hudson enjoys working with the boys and girls of the area it serves. The Company hopes to win their friendship . . . to help teach them the value of the American private enterprise system . . . to assist them to become good citizens.

Over the past years a detailed youth program has been worked out which the Company believes fills a need in the community. Indications are that the program has won not only the support and respect of the younger generation but that it has had definite influence in promoting good education and good citizenship.

Highlights of the program are as follows:

Scholarship Program

Each spring the principal of every public and parochial high school in the area is invited to choose a junior student of outstanding ability to compete for a four-year engineering scholarship to Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. Students selected take a three-week summer indoctrination course covering all phases of public utility operation. (See pictures 6 and 9.) From each summer's group the outstanding boy is selected as the winner of the scholarship. At present: four boys are attending RPI as a result of this course. (See picture 2; Edward P. Walsh, 1951 winner, Highland High School, receives scholarship award from Central Hudson's Roland S. Child while, center, William H. Yates, school principal, and John C. Miller, right, guidance counselor, look on.)

Lamp Building Activity

Each year the Company conducts a lamp building activity. During the last program concluded in May, 1952, more than 1700 industrial arts and woodworking students in 34 area high schools participated with prizes for each school and an over-all grand prize. The Company contributes prizes and electrical equipment and boys and girls build lamps to their own original design but according to rigid specifications. (See pictures 8; lamp building Poughkeepsie Vocational Annex, and 12; Haldane Central School, Cold Spring.) (See picture 3; Central Hudson president Ernest R. Acker awards 1952 top prize to Charles Rex, Kingston High School.)

Cooking Demonstrations

Plant Visits

Students from many schools visit Central Hudson gas and electric installations each year. This plant visit program has been particularly popular with rural schools and with physics and science students of all schools. Of special interest is a gas study program conducted for a number of years. (See picture 1; children from Spackenkill Grade, Poughkeepsie, visit Danskammer Point Steam Station.) (See picture 7; a group of Poughkeepsie High School science students visit Poughkeepsie Gas Plant.)

Printed Teaching Aids

The Company has available many publications as teaching aids. From time to time contributions have been made to school libraries of materials provided by the Edison Electric Institute and the American Gas Association. (See picture 4.)

Motion Pictures

The Company maintains a constantly changing library of motion pictures for loan to schools. Most of the school children in the area see a number of films supplied by the Company during every school year. (See picture 10.)

Use of Company Facilities

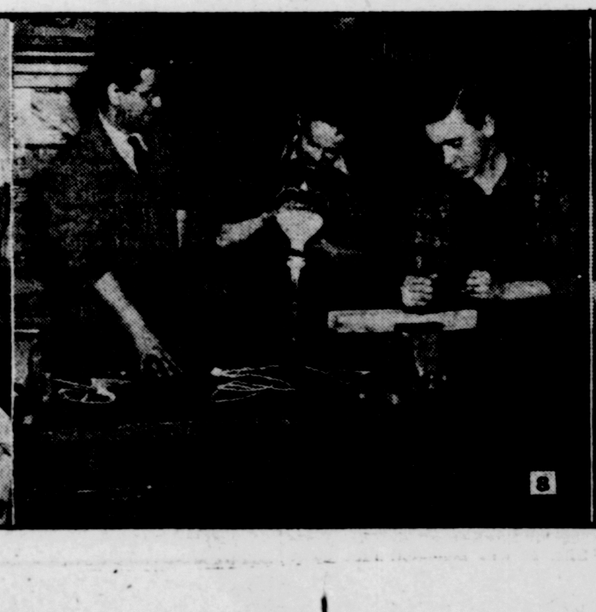

The Company's main commercial offices have auditoriums which may be used for meetings of such organizations as the Girl and Boy Scouts as well as adult community groups. (See picture 5; Girl Scouts hold a council meeting in Newburgh Office auditorium.)

Speakers

A number of high schools in the Company's area have "career days" for graduating seniors. Central Hudson is always ready to provide speakers on these occasions to present the story of a utility career. The Company prides itself as being a local company manned by local people. It is hoped that local boys and girls of today will be the company of tomorrow.

Future plans call for a continuation and improvement of this program.

Exhibits, Demonstrations Viewed By Telephone Employes' Families

Educational and Social Evening Greatly Enjoyed

A carnival atmosphere prevailed at the New York Telephone Company Garage at Bruyn avenue and Cornell street Thursday evening when local employes and their families gathered for a social and educational evening.

The large crowd attending the event examined exhibits, watched demonstrations, attended movies and enjoyed a buffet luncheon. Charles E. Burnett, manager of the local office, pointed out that one of the purposes of the meeting was to demonstrate to the families the nature of work performed by company employes.

In addition to demonstrations of a voice recorder and polaroid camera the following exhibits were enjoyed: Safety, line trucks, tools and equipment, splicers trucks, tools and equipment, cable display, installers trucks, teletype and dial unit display, commercial force display, supplies display, garage demonstrations, engineers display and pioneers dis play.

The committee in charge was composed of Paul E. Jones, chairman, E. A. Betzweiser, R. B. Bilyou, Miss V. A. Farrell, A. B. Grier, K. E. Hornbeck, T. T. Jonescu, G. E. McLane, R. L. Melius, W. C. Pieper and V. H. Steeley.

Operation Described

Operation of the local branch of the company was described in the exhibits. It was pointed out that personnel in the business office, 14 Henry street, handled the telephone needs of the public, took orders for new service and changes in present service and collected money, and that the plant engineer's office, 60 Bruyn avenue, planned, designed and issued work prints to build new plant and rehabilitate existing plant, obtain the necessary permits, adjust claims, supervise transmission matters and keep outside plant records.

The line and cable placing group places the poles, strings the wires and runs the cables which are the backbone parts of the telephone system. They also replace the plant when it is damaged by severe storms or is worn out and relocate the plant to meet the requirements of state, county and municipal authorities.

The splicers connect the hundreds of single wire ends contained in the cables so that there is a continuous talking path from the central office to the customers' premises. It is his task in case of cable trouble to locate and repair the fault whether the cable is run aerially on poles, under the city streets in conduit or buried in the earth in rural areas.

The installation and repair group is to install and keep in working order the telephones in people's houses and all of the PBX switchboards, teletypewriters and other special equipment in business offices. These men also maintain the radio equipment in the state police cars and many other mobile-telephone installations.

The central office force has the task of assigning each new request for a telephone to the proper cable and wire facilities, handles trouble reports, tests the plant to locate and anticipate trouble and keeps the central office equipment working. The motor vehicle force keeps the fleet rolling and in tip-top condition. The supply force produces the tools and materials for all forces to complete their jobs and the building maintenance force keep the building clean and in safe repair.

Company Has Grown

It was pointed out that the company had come a long way since the first telephone was put in service in Kingston in 1878 by the Ulster County Telephone Company, a private line between two stores of the Van Deusen Brothers wholesale drugs. One store was on Wall street and the other on East Strand.

According to a newspaper clipping of that era, "a telephone promoter used the line to demonstrate the convenience of the telephone."

In 1880 there were two exchanges in Kingston, operated by the Hudson River Telephone Company, successor to the Ulster County Company. They were located in the uptown and downtown stationery stores of the Winter Brothers. Everett and Treadwell, flour and feed merchants, at 132 North Front street, the first commercial subscribers here, received a telephone about this time. This firm is still carrying on business at the same location.

The New York Telephone Company purchased the property of the Hudson River Company in 1909 and has brought about many improvements since that time, including additions to the building, in 1921 and 1928, both facing on O'Reilly street. With the second addition a new toll board was installed.

Over 15,000 Telephones

To meet constantly increasing demand for service, 10 additional central office switchboards have been added in the past two years. At present there are 39 local, 40 toll and eight information positions with five more to be added shortly. Another indication of the growth is in the number of calls. In 1940 a total of 43,000 local and 2,000 out-of-town calls were made daily. The latest figures show the number has jumped to 68,000 local and 5,700 out-of-town calls daily.

The progress not only of the company but also of the community can be judged by the fact that in 1920, about a decade after the company took over operations here, there were 4,400 telephones in service. In 1930 there were 7,400 and now there are more than 15,000.

The rapid growth of the telephone industry here since 1946 is in line with the company's statewide program of expansion and improvement during this period which has totaled more than $850,000,000 and added 2,000,000 of the 5,300,000 telephones now being served throughout the territory.

What? You're going Hallowe'ening
But just for gentle fun.
Then come, all come, to our house.
We have handouts for each one.

BOO TO YOU, TOO--

So, you're going Hallowe'ening
And pranks are on your mind;
Well stay away from our house,
'Cause we're the fiendish kind.

We took out all our windows;
Our door bell does not ring;
Our garbage can is out of sight;
We've taken in the swing.

There are no tires on our car.
The rake is out of reach.
And—oh yes, hungry Fido
Was taken off his leash.

What? You're going Hallowe'ening
But just for gentle fun.
Then come, all come, to our house.

SOS DEAR MOTHERS

A letter this morning explains: "I am a young business woman and travel back and forth on the subway every day. I buy a newspaper every morning with the express purpose of reading it on the subway as this is the only chance I have to keep up on the news. But can I read it? Certainly not! School is now in session again and it is impossible to ever hear yourself think above the noise that is made by these boys and girls. They don't talk, they shout at the top of their lungs, laugh out loud and push and shove each other in jest—many times falling over the passengers. In short, their manners are abominable. They just "take over," so to speak, without any regard for the other passengers. Perhaps this "self-expression" which is being taught in many of the schools today is responsible for it. Perhaps a word from you in your column will help."

Answer: I doubt very much that any of these children ever see this column—if, however, some of their mothers do it may be that they will help your situation.

Widow's Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Post: I am a widow in my late thirties and expect to be married again shortly. We will be married in church and would like to have our friends and relatives present. As they number quite a few, would it be proper to send out engraved invitations for a second wedding? If so, how are they worded? Should they be sent out in my parents names

Answer: Send out invitations by all means and word them in your own names:

Mrs. Mary Jones
and
Mr. John Smith
request the honour of your presence
at their marriage, etc.

Signature Is Never "Mrs."

Dear Mrs. Post: In signing my son's report card, do I sign it Mary Jane Smith, or Mrs. John Smith.

Answer: Mary Jane Smith.

Ike Charges . . .

do the job either at home or abroad that America will be called upon to do in the next four years."

'Could Not Exploit Ike'

Eisenhower said it is the Democrats, not he, who have changed. "Because they could not exploit me, they are determined to destroy me; to destroy my lifelong friendships, my reputation, my spirit," he declared.

In speaking, Eisenhower passed over portions of his written text, apparently when he began running behind his allotted 30-minute TV time. One part deleted read:

"Sober responsible correspondents who report political campaigns year after year have written that our opponents in this election have reached a record low in mud-slinging, distortion, vilification and character assassination."

He listed the things he said the American people want—lower taxes, higher prosperty for all income groups, an effort by "the best minds of America" to bring an honorable end to the war in Korea.

Eisenhower said that to achieve these things, unity in the United States is essential. His first effort, he went on, was to achieve unity in the Republican party. And, again hitting back at Democratic accusations, he said:

"No single one of them (his Republican backers) thought it necessary to tell me that unity must never be bought at the cost of principle."

Introduced by Dewey

Eisenhower was introduced by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, who brought round after round of applause, especially to his claim that the Truman administration "is so rotten it is about to collapse."

Dewey accused Truman of throwing "dead cats, rotten eggs and tomatoes" at Eisenhower.

Eisenhower's schedule called for him to tour Chicago today, with his main speech at Chicago Stadium at 10 p. m. (EST). It will be broadcast over statewide television and radio.

He planned to fly back to New York tomorrow afternoon.

New York state's 45 electoral votes constitute the nation's richest stake in the battle for the presidency. Observers see the state, at this point, as hanging in delicate balance.

So Eisenhower gave it everything he had in three tough, work-horse days.

Much of his effort was mere touring through the heavily settled centers. He made 12 speeches, formal and informal, stopped scores of times to shake hands, chat with groups of spectators along the route, receive gifts. Mostly, he simply sat on the back of an open convertible, waving his arms and smiling.

In that, he was capitalizing on one of his greatest assets—his personal popularity.

It appears to be tremendous. It could be the deciding factor in a close election. Crowds at some points covered the streets with flowers, grabbed his hand, ruffled his thin hair, pulled at his clothing.

But for police escorts, he might have been mobbed and mauled several times.

The importance of these demonstrations, however, is hard to gauge in terms of votes. Curiosity, a considerable personal regard may be something apart from political loyalty. Correspondents who covered the tour, and his appearances elsewhere around the country, are examining the question:

"Does all the excitement mean votes."

Three Soldiers Killed

Gailsdorf, Germany, Oct. 31 (AP)—An American tank plunged 30 feet from a bridge into the Kocher river today, killing three GI's and injuring four. Another soldier was listed as missing. An army announcement said the tank—participating in a training maneuver—made a sharp turn while crossin the bridge. The wooden pedestrian walk collapsed and the tank fell into the shallow stream. Names of the dead were witheld pending notification of kin.

GI Christmas Rules Are Given for Europe

Heidelberg, Germany, Oct. 31 (AP)—The army today promised the GI in Europe that he can be home by Christmas—if:

1.—He has enough leave time to his credit.

2.—He has a round-trip flight ticket in his pocket.

3.—He has enough money to cover all other expenses.

4.—His absence can be charged against the quota of authorized absence.

Van Fleet May

Couldn't Get Approval

Van Fleet wrote that the South Korean forces are now in "apple-pie" order but that he had been unable thus far to win approval of his plan to double their strength to 20 divisions. He added:

"Being unable to get 10 more, I said: 'Give me six and I would release two U. S. divisions; or, give me four and I would release one U. S. division.' It finally got down to a two-division increase but still no approval to this date."

The Republican national committee got out a statement, apparently prepared in advance of the White House denial that Van Fleet would be ousted. The statement, by Sen. Frank Carlson of Kansas, said Gen. Douglas MacArthur was dismissed as UN Far East commander for "complaining about not being permitted to win the Korean war" and Lt. Gen. Alfred E. Wedemeyer "retired in disgust over official policy."

"Now Gen. Ames A. Van Fleet, who has done such a magnificent job as commander in Korea, is coming home," the statement said, adding:

"Quick punishment is what awaits our ranking and most experienced military men who oppose our bankrupt policy of being bled of our finest manhood for an indefinite stalemate."

Bucks Political Angles

The Daily News story by John O'Donnell, its Washington bureau chief, said Van Fleet was a West Point classmate of Eisenhower, and added:

"Like MacArthur, he has been bucking political decisions, and has chafed under the restraints. His letter revealed this to the anger of Truman and the Fair Deal political headquarters.

"The old question of army seniority and pride of rank also comes into the picture. Van Fleet was graduated from West Point in 1915, two years ahead of his present military superior in the Far East, Gen. Mark Clark."

The News story said the White House learned of the Van Fleet letter soon after it arrived in Washington and added:

"Hard on the heels of this knowledge came the decision to remove Gen. Van Fleet in the near future. Privately the word came, if not to the general in Korea, certainly to Mrs. Van Fleet in Washington, of the White House-dictated political move to call back the general. So Mrs. Van Fleet saw to it that a copy of her husband's letter reached sympathetic eyes—the eyes of Truman's political foe, Gen. Eisenhower. * * *

Not Hard to Figure

Mrs. Van Fleet and Mrs. Eisenhower have had many years of association in (army) posts over the world. It is not hard to understand how the (letter) copy which Van Fleet sent to his wife at the time he sent the original to Gen. Mood found its way into the Eisenhower files. * * *

"What got under the political hide of Truman in the final fury of the campaign was the decisive fashion in which his combat commander in Korea backed up the Eisenhower campaign issue (on South Korean troops) * * *."

There were reports a few weeks ago that Van Fleet—60 years old and eligible for retirement next year—might be replaced. At that time, however, officials indicated no decision on relieving him had been reached. His work in Korea has been praised by his superiors, and they could keep him on duty beyond the retirement age.

Discuss Legislative Bills

Business Men Are Advised to Take Interest in Laws

The Empire State Chamber of Commerce in co-operation with its affiliated local chambers of commerce, is sponsoring throughout the state a series of 18 regional legislative conferences designed to bring to the attention of Chamber of Commerce members some idea as to what has been done in the past and what may be expected in the future from the legislature in the way of laws which affect business.

Thursday evening one of these regional conferences was held at the Governor Clinton Hotel in cooperation with the Kingston Chamber of Commerce and the Saugerties and Hudson Chambers of Commerce.

There were 53 in attendance, eight being from Saugerties, 12 from Hudson and the remainder from the Kingston Chamber. Lawrence MacAvery, president of the Kingston Chamber of Commerce, presided and presented Fabian L. Russell of Saugerties as moderator.

Speakers for Session

Speakers were William A. Mills, executive vice-president of the Empire State Chamber of Commerce; Homer E. Scace, director of the Department of Governmental Affairs of the Empire State Chamber and Robert Eaton, director of organizations service of the Empire State Chamber of Commerce.

It was pointed out by the speakers that the 1953 Legislature will be called upon to make important decisions affecting business. Business men should know something about these issues and should be in a position to make responsible informed decisions on them. The purpose of the state-wide conferences conducted by the Empire State chamber is to present these issues to the business men of the areas and give them an insight on what may be expected and stimulate them to take a more vigorous part in legislative programs.

Meetings Non-Political

The meetings are non-political and the speakers stressed the need for better co-operation between business men, who represent a cross section of the public interest and the men who sit in the Legislature and attempt to make laws for the people. A lazy attitude taken by the average businessman toward government is in a large measure responsible for the increasing difficulty he has in operating within the framework of constantly expanding governmental bureaucracy higher taxes and restrictive legislation.

A current appraisal of the legislative issues affecting business were presented by the speakers, who designed their talks to raise questions, rather than to answer them. Various phases of legislation as affecting the businessman were discussed and at the conclusion of the talks an opportunity was given to ask questions. Several availed themselves of that opportunity.

Heavy Tax Burden

With New York state bearing about 15 per cent of the Federal taxation burden, it is important that business men of the state for their own good take an active part in the program of legislation. The speakers offered the facilities of the Empire State Chamber of Commerce to local Chambers of Commerce to study legislation and they urged that local Chambers of Commerce appoint committees to consider the legislative programs.

State government was the principal topic under discussion and it was pointed out that the 1953 Legislature would have many important matters before it which will affect the business man. Among them will be Unemployment Insurance, Taxation, Pensions, Workmen's Compensation, Public Assistance, Labor legislation, Compulsory Insurance for car owners, Civil Service, Housing, Truck weight and distance taxes, Permanent personal registration and many others.

After Good Government

Businessmen were asked to familiarize themselves with these matters and contact their legislative representatives and let them know where business in their particular area stands on the matters to come up in Albany at the next session.

Working through Chamber of Commerce committees and in conjunction with the Empire State Chamber of Commerce, it was the opinion of the speakers that much could be accomplished in the way of better government.

Through charts the speakers illustrated in simple fashion the vast problem of government and its cost to the people.

GOOD TASTE TODAY

By EMILY POST

(Author of 'Etiquette,' 'Children Are People,' etc.)

SOS DEAR MOTHERS

A letter this morning explains: "I am a young business woman and travel back and forth on the subway every day. I buy a newspaper every morning with the express purpose of reading it on the subway as this is the only chance I have to keep up on the news. But can I read it? Certainly not! School is now in session again and it is impossible to ever hear yourself think above the noise that is made by these boys and girls. They don't talk, they shout at the top of their lungs, laugh out loud and push and shove each other in jest—many times falling over the passengers. In short, their manners are abominable. They just "take over," so to speak, without any regard for the other passengers. Perhaps this "self-expression" which is being taught in many of the schools today is responsible for it. Perhaps a word from you in your column will help."

Answer: I doubt very much that any of these children ever see this column—if, however, some of their mothers do it may be that they will help your situation.

Widow's Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Post: I am a widow in my late thirties and expect to be married again shortly. We will be married in church and would like to have our friends and relatives present. As they number quite a few, would it be proper to send out engraved invitations for a second wedding? If so, how are they worded? Should they be sent out in my parents names

Answer: Send out invitations by all means and word them in your own names:

Mr. John Smith
request the honour of your presence
at their marriage, etc.

Signature Is Never "Mrs."

Dear Mrs. Post: In signing my son's report card, do I sign it Mary Jane Smith, or Mrs. John Smith.

Answer: Mary Jane Smith.

Dixie Lee Still in Coma

Beverly Hills, Calif., Oct. 31 (AP)—Crooner Bing Crosby's wife, Dixie Lee, 40, continued in a coma today with no change in her condition. In poor health for several years, she was stricken gravely ill last Sunday. Her physician says there's little hope of her recovery. He declined to specify the nature of her illness.

E. Frank Flanagan, president of the Savings and Loan Association of Kingston, has been appointed a member of the Committee on State Legislation of the Savings Association League of New York State, according to an announcement by David Ford, president of that organization.

This committee initiates state legislative matters of interest to savings and loan associations, and also provides liaison with the New York State Banking Department, the Savings and Loan Bank of the State of New York and other state and federal government agencies.

Two hundred of the 235 savings and loan associations in New York State, with total assets exceeding $1,500,000,000, are members of the League.

Ike Charges . . .

do the job either at home or abroad that America will be called upon to do in the next four years."

'Could Not Exploit Ike'

Eisenhower said it is the Democrats, not he, who have changed. "Because they could not exploit me, they are determined to destroy me; to destroy my lifelong friendships, my reputation, my spirit," he declared.

In speaking, Eisenhower passed over portions of his written text, apparently when he began running behind his allotted 30-minute TV time. One part deleted read:

"Sober responsible correspondents who report political campaigns year after year have written that our opponents in this election have reached a record low in mud-slinging, distortion, vilification and character assassination."

He listed the things he said the American people want—lower taxes, higher prosperty for all income groups, an effort by "the best minds of America" to bring an honorable end to the war in Korea.

Eisenhower said that to achieve these things, unity in the United States is essential. His first effort, he went on, was to achieve unity in the Republican party. And, again hitting back at Democratic accusations, he said:

"No single one of them (his Republican backers) thought it necessary to tell me that unity must never be bought at the cost of principle."

Introduced by Dewey

Eisenhower was introduced by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, who brought round after round of applause, especially to his claim that the Truman administration "is so rotten it is about to collapse."

Dewey accused Truman of throwing "dead cats, rotten eggs and tomatoes" at Eisenhower.

Eisenhower's schedule called for him to tour Chicago today, with his main speech at Chicago Stadium at 10 p. m. (EST). It will be broadcast over statewide television and radio.

He planned to fly back to New York tomorrow afternoon.

New York state's 45 electoral votes constitute the nation's richest stake in the battle for the presidency. Observers see the state, at this point, as hanging in delicate balance.

So Eisenhower gave it everything he had in three tough, work-horse days.

Much of his effort was mere touring through the heavily settled centers. He made 12 speeches, formal and informal, stopped scores of times to shake hands, chat with groups of spectators along the route, receive gifts. Mostly, he simply sat on the back of an open convertible, waving his arms and smiling.

In that, he was capitalizing on one of his greatest assets—his personal popularity.

It appears to be tremendous. It could be the deciding factor in a close election. Crowds at some points covered the streets with flowers, grabbed his hand, ruffled his thin hair, pulled at his clothing.

But for police escorts, he might have been mobbed and mauled several times.

The importance of these demonstrations, however, is hard to gauge in terms of votes. Curiosity, a considerable personal regard may be something apart from political loyalty. Correspondents who covered the tour, and his appearances elsewhere around the country, are examining the question:

"Does all the excitement mean votes."

Three Soldiers Killed

Gailsdorf, Germany, Oct. 31 (AP)—An American tank plunged 30 feet from a bridge into the Kocher river today, killing three GI's and injuring four. Another soldier was listed as missing. An army announcement said the tank—participating in a training maneuver—made a sharp turn while crossin the bridge. The wooden pedestrian walk collapsed and the tank fell into the shallow stream. Names of the dead were witheld pending notification of kin.

GI Christmas Rules Are Given for Europe

Heidelberg, Germany, Oct. 31 (AP)—The army today promised the GI in Europe that he can be home by Christmas—if:

1.—He has enough leave time to his credit.

2.—He has a round-trip flight ticket in his pocket.

3.—He has enough money to cover all other expenses.

4.—His absence can be charged against the quota of authorized absence.

Van Fleet May

Couldn't Get Approval

Van Fleet wrote that the South Korean forces are now in "apple-pie" order but that he had been unable thus far to win approval of his plan to double their strength to 20 divisions. He added:

"Being unable to get 10 more, I said: 'Give me six and I would release two U. S. divisions; or, give me four and I would release one U. S. division.' It finally got down to a two-division increase but still no approval to this date."

The Republican national committee got out a statement, apparently prepared in advance of the White House denial that Van Fleet would be ousted. The statement, by Sen. Frank Carlson of Kansas, said Gen. Douglas MacArthur was dismissed as UN Far East commander for "complaining about not being permitted to win the Korean war" and Lt. Gen. Alfred E. Wedemeyer "retired in disgust over official policy."

"Now Gen. Ames A. Van Fleet, who has done such a magnificent job as commander in Korea, is coming home," the statement said, adding:

"Quick punishment is what awaits our ranking and most experienced military men who oppose our bankrupt policy of being bled of our finest manhood for an indefinite stalemate."

Bucks Political Angles

The Daily News story by John O'Donnell, its Washington bureau chief, said Van Fleet was a West Point classmate of Eisenhower, and added:

"Like MacArthur, he has been bucking political decisions, and has chafed under the restraints. His letter revealed this to the anger of Truman and the Fair Deal political headquarters.

"The old question of army seniority and pride of rank also comes into the picture. Van Fleet was graduated from West Point in 1915, two years ahead of his present military superior in the Far East, Gen. Mark Clark."

The News story said the White House learned of the Van Fleet letter soon after it arrived in Washington and added:

"Hard on the heels of this knowledge came the decision to remove Gen. Van Fleet in the near future. Privately the word came, if not to the general in Korea, certainly to Mrs. Van Fleet in Washington, of the White House-dictated political move to call back the general. So Mrs. Van Fleet saw to it that a copy of her husband's letter reached sympathetic eyes—the eyes of Truman's political foe, Gen. Eisenhower. * * *

Not Hard to Figure

Mrs. Van Fleet and Mrs. Eisenhower have had many years of association in (army) posts over the world. It is not hard to understand how the (letter) copy which Van Fleet sent to his wife at the time he sent the original to Gen. Mood found its way into the Eisenhower files. * * *

"What got under the political hide of Truman in the final fury of the campaign was the decisive fashion in which his combat commander in Korea backed up the Eisenhower campaign issue (on South Korean troops) * * *."

There were reports a few weeks ago that Van Fleet—60 years old and eligible for retirement next year—might be replaced. At that time, however, officials indicated no decision on relieving him had been reached. His work in Korea has been praised by his superiors, and they could keep him on duty beyond the retirement age.

Discuss Legislative Bills

Business Men Are Advised to Take Interest in Laws

The Empire State Chamber of Commerce in co-operation with its affiliated local chambers of commerce, is sponsoring throughout the state a series of 18 regional legislative conferences designed to bring to the attention of Chamber of Commerce members some idea as to what has been done in the past and what may be expected in the future from the legislature in the way of laws which affect business.

Thursday evening one of these regional conferences was held at the Governor Clinton Hotel in co-operation with the Kingston Chamber of Commerce and the Saugerties and Hudson Chambers of Commerce.

There were 53 in attendance, eight being from Saugerties, 12 from Hudson and the remainder from the Kingston Chamber. Lawrence MacAvery, president of the Kingston Chamber of Commerce, presided and presented Fabian L. Russell of Saugerties as moderator.

Speakers for Session

Speakers were William A. Mills, executive vice-president of the Empire State Chamber of Commerce; Homer E. Scace, director of the Department of Governmental Affairs of the Empire State Chamber and Robert Eaton, director of organizations service of the Empire State Chamber of Commerce.

It was pointed out by the speakers that the 1953 Legislature will be called upon to make important decisions affecting business. Business men should know something about these issues and should be in a position to make responsible informed decisions on them. The purpose of the state-wide conferences, conducted by the Empire State chamber is to present these issues to the business men of the areas and give them an insight on what may be expected and stimulate them to take a more vigorous part in legislative programs.

Meetings Non-Political

The meetings are non-political and the speakers stressed the need for better co-operation between business men, who represent a cross section of the public interest and the men who sit in the Legislature and attempt to make laws for the people. A lazy attitude taken by the average busineessman toward government is in a large measure responsible for the increasing difficulty he has in operating within the framework of constantly expanding governmental bureaucracy higher taxes and restrictive legislation.

A current appraisal of the legislative issues affecting business were presented by the speakers, who designed their talks to raise questions, rather than to answer them. Various phases of legislation as affecting the businessman were discussed and at the conclusion of the talks an opportunity was given to ask questions. Several availed themselves of that opportunity.

Heavy Tax Burden

With New York state bearing about 15 per cent of the Federal taxation burden, it is important that business men of the state for their own good take an active part in the program of legislation. The speakers offered the facilities of the Empire State Chamber of Commerce to local Chambers of Commerce to study legislation and they urged that local Chambers of Commerce appoint committees to consider the legislative programs.

State government was the principal topic under discussion and it was pointed out that the 1953 Legislature would have many important matters before it which will affect the business man. Among them will be Unemployment Insurance, Taxation, Pensions, Workmen's Compensation, Public Assistance, Labor legislation, Compulsory Insurance for car owners, Civil Service, Housing, Truck weight and distance taxes, Permanent personal registration and many others.

After Good Government

Businessmen were asked to familiarize themselves with these matters and contact their legislative representatives and let them know where business in their particular area stands on the matters to come up in Albany at the next session.

Working through Chamber of Commerce committees and in conjunction with the Empire State Chamber of Commerce, it was the opinion of the speakers that much could be accomplished in the way of better government.

Through charts the speakers illustrated in simple fashion the vast problem of government and its cost to the people.

THINKING IT OVER

ROW A ALL THE WAY

As we have said before this newspaper believes that the election of all the Republican candidates on the ballot next Tuesday is vital to the future well being of America. In saying that we mean just that—ALL Republican candidates.

We emphasize this point because there has been a movement in this Third Judicial District to induce Republican voters to "cut" Sullivan County Judge William Deckelman, a Democrat running as the Republican nominee for the Supreme Court Judgeship, in favor of the Democratic candidate, Russell G. Hunt of Albany. This movement has not been an entirely open one although it has gone so far as the publishing of prominent but unsigned advertisements in some of the newspapers of this district urging that very thing.

Aware that its voice is small, that powerful forces disagree with its position, that retribution of one sort or another might be its lot for stating its belief, The Saugerties Daily Post nonetheless opposes this movement with all the force at its command. It urges all its readers, Republicans and Democrats alike, to vote for Judge Deckelman for the following reasons:

Most of us reared in upstate New York have been schooled most of our lives to believe that the O'Connell Democratic machine of Albany County is one of the most corrupt political organizations in America. It ranks in this respect with the overthrown Hague machine of Jersey City, the rotten Republican machine that for years throttled Philadelphia, the Pendergast machine of Kansas City and Tammany at its worst in New York to mention only a few. There has been nothing in the memory of living man to cause most of us to change that opinion.

Aware of this, we are now confronted with the story of an "agreement" reached between some Republican leaders of this district and the O'Connell Democracy under terms of which the GOP this year should endorse the Democratic selection for the Supreme Court Justiceship.

If such an agreement was made it should not have been made if for no other reason than that no political party worthy of the name should choose its candidates so blindly.

If such an agreement was made there is no sound moral reason why those not parties to it should be called upon to desert their political faith and that of their fathers to honor it. Our judiciary, in theory at least, is above politics and those raised to the bench should be placed there because of their fitness to serve and not because of their loyalty to political leaders. The people, after all, have a right to choose their judges.

However that may be, the majority of the delegates to the Republican convention called to nominate the party's candidate for this justiceship chose, and we think rightfully, not to honor this agreement. They chose, instead, to reciprocate for last year's endorsement by the Democrats of a Republican for another judgeship by giving the GOP nomination to a Democrat, but not to a Democrat hand-picked by the Albany County bosses of his party.

The majority of the party delegates thus having spoken it appears to us that the party is bound to support their choice in the same way that those whose views were not in the ascendancy at the national convention are bound to support the decision of that parley.

Now if the wisdom of that choice be called into question on the grounds that the Democratic nominee is better qualified to serve as a justice than is the Republican candidate, let us examine some of the facts of the case.

First and foremost of these is the statement by the Democratic spokesman, Mayor Erastus Corning of Albany, that "There is no question of Judge Deckelman's qualifications. He is a fine lawyer of over thirty years standing and has proven his ability as a county judge since 1948." Enough said.

The only failing Judge Deckelman appears to have is that the O'Connell machine doesn't like him.

The argument also has been advanced that the district courts are badly congested and that this congestion is worse in the Counties of Albany and Rensselaer. This is despite the fact that there are three Supreme Court Justices in Albany although, unfortunately perhaps for the O'Connells, all three are Republicans.

For one reason or another lawyers in this part of the district are averse to discussing publicly this Supreme Court situation. There are at least several hereabouts, however, who will tell you privately that Sullivan County needs a Supreme Court Justice at present far more than Albany County does. They will tell you also that Judge Deckelman is a highly capable jurist and that he would be a credit to the higher bench. They will tell you further that he deserves to be elected.

Now Mr. Hunt might likewise serve with credit on the bench, but he should be denied the privilege of serving there at this time if only because he is the hand-picked candidate of the O'Connell Democracy and owes much of his present eminence to his loyalty to that machine. However this may qualify him in the eyes of some Democratic voters, certainly it is no very weighty recomdation to present to Republicans or to those of independent mind.

These, then, are the facts as we see them. With malice toward none and with a decent respect for the honest convictions of voters of all parties, we endorse the candidacy of Judge William Deckelman, Republican nominee for the Supreme Court. We urge every reader to vote for him.

Act as Judges

The judges were Chef de Gare Stan Lawrence, of the Forty and Eight, Meyer Kaplan, Anthony Alecca, Robert Van Gaasbeck, all of the Forty and Eight. Members of the recreation department staff, Mrs. John Valentine, Lorraine McGinnis and Shirley Samuels also acted as judges along with Mrs. Ernest Steuding.

The auditorium show was apparently such a big hit that it kept most of the youth concentrated there.

Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk said today that, "The orderly way in which the children of the city observed Halloween was most commendable."

The most damaging mischief reported to the police was the breaking of a front door window at 98 Main street, and the breaking of two windows with bricks at 1 Wurts street. The former was reported at 7:29 p. m., yesterday, and the latter at 7:40 a. m. today.

A fire in leaves at Elmendorf street and Bruyn avenue was reported at 8 p. m., a disturbance was reported near 167 Tremper avenue at 8:10 p. m., another at Wall street and the Boulevard at 8:20 p. m., and a third at Maiden Lane and Fair street at 8:35 p. m.

Some Barrels Dumped

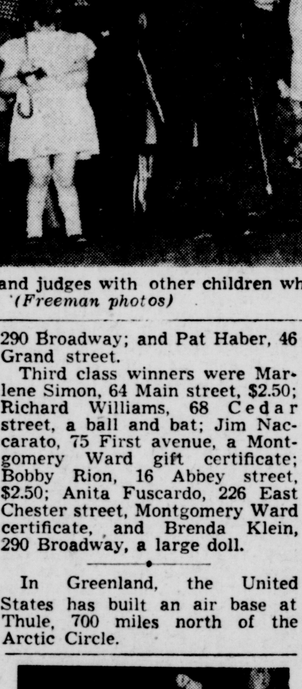

The final report of the night at 9 p. m., said ash barrels had been dumped at the Strand and Ferry street.

A report appropriate enough for Halloween came at 1:15 a. m. today when the watchman at the county quarry informed police headquarters that he had been hearing strange noises and was unable to locate them. Officers Harold DeGraff and Francis Loeffler, went to the area, and reported the noises had stopped. They thought they might have come from animals in the Forsyth Park zoo.

The first prize winners at the auditorium party were awarded $5. The second class winners who won $2.50 were Thomas Tierney, 61 Smith avenue; Penny Jenkins, 17 Liberty street; Alma Hatcher, 229 East Strand; Patty Prusak, 59 Farrelly street; Phylis Klein, 290 Broadway; and Pat Haber, 46 Grand street.

Third class winners were Marlene Simon, 64 Main street, $2.50; Richard Williams, 68 Cedar street, a ball and bat; Jim Naccarato, 75 First avenue, a Montgomery Ward gift certificate; Bobby Rion, 16 Abbey street, $2.50; Anita Fuscardo, 226 East Chester street, Montgomery Ward certificate, and Brenda Klein, 290 Broadway, a large doll.

UN Troops Make

drew toward the end of its 18th day with no signs of a let-up by either side. It was the longest continuous battle since the allies took Heartbreak Ridge on the eastern front last autumn. The allies held Sniper Ridge and its dominant peak, Pinpoint Hill, at last reports Friday.

Triangle Hill and Sniper Ridge command the critical Kumhwa junction to the south. Kumhwa is the eastern base city of the old Iron Triangle on the central front.

The Chinese—creating a diversionary attack on Jane Russell Hill to the east of Triangle's crest—overran the main allied bunker defenses about 2 a. m. Friday.

Heavy Artillery Fire

Allied artillery and mortar units smothered the crest with fire as a prelude to the counter-attack that won it back.

"The hill was boxed in by a curtain of fire," said a frontline officer.

By 7 a. m., the Reds had only one battalion left on the hill. That one was knocked off by the bayonet-weilding allied troops. But the Chinese stormed back.

The Eighth Army said the Chinese had lost an estimated 11,000 casualties and committed several divisions to the battle on the approaches to Papa-San Mountain, a forbidding, sinister Communist stronghold just north of Triangle and Sniper.

Action elsewhere along the front was reported as minor.

Planes Rain Fire

In the air war, allied B-26 bombers flew through rain and blasted supply concentrations, vehicles and trains. Northeast of the Communist capital of Pyongyang, the raiders touched off dozens of explosions and fires, the air force reported.

After they unloaded their bombs, the airmen dropped leaflets reminding civilians they had been warned beforehand of the raids.

B-29 Superforts dumped 100-pound bombs by the score on supply areas at Sunchon and southwest of Pyongyang.

Naval forces unleashed carrier-based planes in strikes against Communist supply arteries paralleling both the east and west coasts.

Kelly Pays . . .

tacted shortly before noon today, he said the funeral director had not yet arrived there.

At the Kelly Funeral Home in this city, it was reported that funeral arrangements had not been completed.

In New York early yesterday, Kelly's lawyer, Whitman Knapp, reiterated that his client preferred death in the chair to a lifetime behind bars.

At a clemency hearing October 21 before Governor Thomas E. Dewey, the lawyer said Kelly maintained he was insane when he shot down the middle-aged Mrs. McHugh.

Last Monday, U. S. Supreme Court Justice Robert Jackson refused to grant a stay of Kelly's execution.

Spurns Traditional Meal

Kelly spurned the prison's traditional last meal of his choice, eating the regular prison fare of corned beef for lunch and boiled lima beans for dinner. However, he requested and got ice cream.

Asked if he had any final message during the afternoon, Kelly said, "No, there is nothing to be said."

Another Is Electrocuted

Electrocuted with Kelly was another murderer convicted of killing a woman, Wallace Ford, Jr., 31-year-old Negro of Buffalo.

Ford was convicted of beating his sister-in-law, Nancy Bridges, 15, over the head with a rock last year and then running an automobile over her. He said she taunted him.

Ford went to the chair first, groaning and muttering, "Please Almighty, help me! Give me a chance."

He entered the death chamber at 11:03 p. m. accompanied by the prison's Protestant chaplain, the Rev. Luther K. Hanum. At 11:06 p. m. Ford was pronounced dead.

Both Ford and Kelly spent 11 months in the death house.

Ford spent his last day hoping for a reprieve.

"Maybe they'll turn me into the yard yet," he said.

THINKING IT OVER

ROW A ALL THE WAY

As we have said before this newspaper believes that the election of all the Republican candidates on the ballot next Tuesday is vital to the future well being of America. In saying that we mean just that—ALL Republican candidates.

We emphasize this point because there has been a movement in this Third Judicial District to induce Republican voters to "cut" Sullivan County Judge William Deckelman, a Democrat running as the Republican nominee for the Supreme Court Judgeship, in favor of the Democratic candidate, Russell G. Hunt of Albany. This movement has not been an entirely open one although it has gone so far as the publishing of prominent but unsigned advertisements in some of the newspapers of this district urging that very thing.

Aware that its voice is small, that powerful forces disagree with its position, that retribution of one sort or another might be its lot for stating its belief, The Saugerties Daily Post nonetheless opposes this movement with all the force at its command. It urges all its readers, Republicans and Democrats alike, to vote for Judge Deckelman for the following reasons:

Most of us reared in upstate New York have been schooled most of our lives to believe that the O'Connell Democratic machine of Albany County is one of the most corrupt political organizations in America. It ranks in this respect with the overthrown Hague machine of Jersey City, the rotten Republican machine that for years throttled Philadelphia, the Pendergast machine of Kansas City and Tammany at its worst in New York to mention only a few. There has been nothing in the memory of living man to cause most of us to change that opinion.

Aware of this, we are now confronted with the story of an "agreement" reached between some Republican leaders of this district and the O'Connell Democracy under terms of which the GOP this year should endorse the Democratic selection for the Supreme Court Justiceship.

If such an agreement was made it should not have been made if for no other reason than that no political party worthy of the name should choose its candidates so blindly.

If such an agreement was made there is no sound moral reason why those not parties to it should be called upon to desert their political faith and that of their fathers to honor it. Our judiciary, in theory at least, is above politics and those raised to the bench should be placed there because of their fitness to serve and not because of their loyalty to political leaders. The people, after all, have a right to choose their judges.

However that may be, the majority of the delegates to the Republican convention called to nominate the party's candidate for this justiceship chose, and we think rightfully, not to honor this agreement. They chose, instead, to reciprocate for last year's endorsement by the Democrats of a Republican for another judgeship by giving the GOP nomination to a Democrat, but not to a Democrat hand-picked by the Albany County bosses of his party.

The majority of the party delegates thus having spoken it appears to us that the party is bound to support their choice in the same way that those whose views were not in the ascendancy at the national convention are bound to support the decision of that parley.

Now if the wisdom of that choice be called into question on the grounds that the Democratic nominee is better qualified to serve as a justice than is the Republican candidate, let us examine some of the facts of the case.

First and foremost of these is the statement by the Democratic spokesman, Mayor Erastus Corning of Albany, that "There is no question of Judge Deckelman's qualifications. He is a fine lawyer of over thirty years standing and has proven his ability as a county judge since 1948." Enough said.

The only failing Judge Deckelman appears to have is that the O'Connell machine doesn't like him.

The argument also has been advanced that the district courts are badly congested and that this congestion is worse in the Counties of Albany and Rensselaer. This is despite the fact that there are three Supreme Court Justices in Albany although, unfortunately perhaps for the O'Connells, all three are Republicans.

For one reason or another lawyers in this part of the district are averse to discussing publicly this Supreme Court situation. There are at least several hereabouts, however, who will tell you privately that Sullivan County needs a Supreme Court Justice at present far more than Albany County does. They will tell you also that Judge Deckelman is a highly capable jurist and that he would be a credit to the higher bench. They will tell you further that he deserves to be elected.

Now Mr. Hunt might likewise serve with credit on the bench, but he should be denied the privilege of serving there at this time if only because he is the hand-picked candidate of the O'Connell Democracy and owes much of his present eminence to his loyalty to that machine. However this may qualify him in the eyes of some Democratic voters, certainly it is no very weighty recomdation to present to Republicans or to those of independent mind.

These, then, are the facts as we see them. With malice toward none and with a decent respect for the honest convictions of voters of all parties, we endorse the candidacy of Judge William Deckelman, Republican nominee for the Supreme Court. We urge every reader to vote for him.

Act as Judges

The judges were Chef de Gare Stan Lawrence, of the Forty and Eight, Meyer Kaplan, Anthony Alecca, Robert Van Gaasbeck, all of the Forty and Eight. Members of the recreation department staff, Mrs. John Valentine, Lorraine McGinnis and Shirley Samuels also acted as judges along with Mrs. Ernest Steuding.

The auditorium show was apparently such a big hit that it kept most of the youth concentrated there.

Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk said today that, "The orderly way in which the children of the city observed Halloween was most commendable."

The most damaging mischief reported to the police was the breaking of a front door window at 98 Main street, and the breaking of two windows with bricks at 1 Wurts street. The former was reported at 7:29 p. m., yesterday, and the latter at 7:40 a. m. today.

A fire in leaves at Elmendorf street and Bruyn avenue was reported at 8 p. m., a disturbance was reported near 167 Tremper avenue at 8:10 p. m., another at Wall street and the Boulevard at 8:20 p. m., and a third at Maiden Lane and Fair street at 8:35 p. m.

Some Barrels Dumped

The final report of the night at 9 p. m., said ash barrels had been dumped at the Strand and Ferry street.

A report appropriate enough for Halloween came at 1:15 a. m. today when the watchman at the county quarry informed police headquarters that he had been hearing strange noises and was unable to locate them. Officers Harold DeGraff and Francis Loeffler, went to the area, and reported the noises had stopped. They thought they might have come from animals in the Forsyth Park zoo.

The first prize winners at the auditorium party were awarded $5. The second class winners who won $2.50 were Thomas Tierney, 61 Smith avenue; Penny Jenkins, 17 Liberty street; Alma Hatcher, 229 East Strand; Patty Prusak, 59 Farrelly street; Phyllis Klein, 290 Broadway; and Pat Haber, 46 Grand street.

Third class winners were Marlene Simon, 64 Main street, $2.50; Richard Williams, 68 Cedar street, a ball and bat; Jim Naccarato, 75 First avenue, a Montgomery Ward gift certificate; Bobby Rion, 16 Abbey street, $2.50; Anita Fuscardo, 226 East Chester street, Montgomery Ward certificate, and Brenda Klein, 290 Broadway, a large doll.

UN Troops Make

drew toward the end of its 18th day with no signs of a let-up by either side. It was the longest continuous battle since the allies took Heartbreak Ridge on the eastern front last autumn. The allies held Sniper Ridge and its dominant peak, Pinpoint Hill, at last reports Friday.

Triangle Hill and Sniper Ridge command the critical Kumhwa junction to the south. Kumhwa is the eastern base city of the old Iron Triangle on the central front.

The Chinese—creating a diversionary attack on Jane Russell Hill to the east of Triangle's crest—overran the main allied bunker defenses about 2 a. m. Friday.

Heavy Artillery Fire

Allied artillery and mortar units smothered the crest with fire as a prelude to the counter-attack that won it back.

"The hill was boxed in by a curtain of fire," said a frontline officer.

By 7 a. m., the Reds had only one battalion left on the hill. That one was knocked off by the bayonet-weilding allied troops. But the Chinese stormed back.

The Eighth Army said the Chinese had lost an estimated 11,000 casualties and committed several divisions to the battle on the approaches to Papa-San Mountain, a forbidding, sinister Communist stronghold just north of Triangle and Sniper.

Action elsewhere along the front was reported as minor.

Planes Rain Fire

In the air war, allied B-26 bombers flew through rain and blasted supply concentrations, vehicles and trains. Northeast of the Communist capital of Pyongyang, the raiders touched off dozens of explosions and fires, the air force reported.

After they unloaded their bombs, the airmen dropped leaflets reminding civilians they had been warned beforehand of the raids.

B-29 Superforts dumped 100-pound bombs by the score on supply areas at Sunchon and southwest of Pyongyang.

Naval forces unleashed carrier-based planes in strikes against Communist supply arteries paralleling both the east and west coasts.

Kelly Pays . . .

tacted shortly before noon today, he said the funeral director had not yet arrived there.

At the Kelly Funeral Home in this city, it was reported that funeral arrangements had not been completed.

In New York early yesterday, Kelly's lawyer, Whitman Knapp, reiterated that his client preferred death in the chair to a lifetime behind bars.

At a clemency hearing October 21 before Governor Thomas E. Dewey, the lawyer said Kelly maintained he was insane when he shot down the middle-aged Mrs. McHugh.

Last Monday, U. S. Supreme Court Justice Robert Jackson refused to grant a stay of Kelly's execution.

Spurns Traditional Meal

Kelly spurned the prison's traditional last meal of his choice, eating the regular prison fare of corned beef for lunch and boiled lima beans for dinner. However, he requested and got ice cream.

Asked if he had any final message during the afternoon, Kelly said, "No, there is nothing to be said."

Another Is Electrocuted

Electrocuted with Kelly was another murderer convicted of killing a woman, Wallace Ford, Jr., 31-year-old Negro of Buffalo.

Ford was convicted of beating his sister-in-law, Nancy Bridges, 15, over the head with a rock last year and then running an automobile over her. He said she taunted him.

Ford went to the chair first, groaning and muttering, "Please Almighty, help me! Give me a chance."

He entered the death chamber at 11:03 p. m. accompanied by the prison's Protestant chaplain, the Rev. Luther K. Hanum. At 11:06 p. m. Ford was pronounced dead.

Both Ford and Kelly spent 11 months in the death house.

Ford spent his last day hoping for a reprieve.

"Maybe they'll turn me into the yard yet," he said.

Nation Nationalize Its Tin Industry

La Paz, Bolivia, Oct. 31 (AP)—Bolivia nationalized today the tin mines owned by the country's three biggest producers—the Patino, Hochschild and Aramayo companies.

Tin is Bolivia's only major export and her biggest source of income—about 70 per cent of the total. Nationalization means that the mines and properties of the big companies now belong to the state, that the state is the employer of the labor working in the mines and that revenue derived from the sale of tin goes directly to the state through a corporation set up as the operating agency.

The nationalization decree set forth provisional sums — about 21¾ million dollars total—to be paid the companies as indemnities —figures far under what the mining firms say the property is worth. They estimate their holdings at about 60 million dollars. The government, however, already has handed them a bill for 520 million, charging that the companies made illegal profits through foreign exchange manipulations and evaded income taxes.

A gas main in the area of the sewer project on Clinton avenue between Cedar and Henry streets is being relocated by men of the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corp., in preparation for actual start of the job.

Witness Says He Feared Death if He Refused Work

New York, Oct. 31 (AP)—A government witness says he, like former Sgt. John David Provoo, was a wartime interpreter for the Japanese and feared death if he refused the work.

The witness, Capt. Richard Sakakida, was cross-examined yesterday in the treason trial of Provoo, accused of courting favor from his captors and giving information resulting in torture and death to fellow Americans.

Sakakida, a sergeant captured on Corregidor, admitted that he, too, served as an interpreter for the Japanese at the trial of five American officers charged with war crimes. The five were executed.

Sakakida, a Japanese-American, was asked by defense counsel George Plotkin:

"It was your belief, sir, that your head would be chopped off if you didn't (do the interpreting)?"

"Yes, sir," replied Sakakida.

Sakakida also testified that he filed no written report against Provoo until January, 1946, and then because he was asked for it.

Provoo, 35, eventually got an honorable discharge from the army, re-enlisted and was in the service until he was indicted in 1949. If convicted of treason he faces a possible death penalty.

Cross-Breeding Bees

Srinagar, Kashmir (AP)—Government officials say the importation of Italian honey bees has improved the local strain. The development of hybrid types by crossing Kashmir's native bees with queen bees of superior type imported from Italy was so successful that 17 bee colonies including several million insects were bred in one year, officials reported. Honey production by the new types, bred from the Italian Aphis Mellifica species, is said to be far superior to that of the usual Indian types. The Italian-Kashmir honey makers will have their first general showing next year when the All-Indian Beekeepers Conference meets here.

Agricultural Progress Slow

Manila (AP)—A U. S. Mutual Security Agency expert says the Philippines is below par in agricultural production because of slow progress toward mechanized farming. Robert T. McMillan, MSA sociologist, compared the islands' rice yield in 1918 and 1951 and found that last year's crop was the same as 33 years earlier. He said one of the chief reasons for the slow application of better farming methods was due to the old system of "one peasant, one plow, and one work animal" on small plots of land.

Production of coated stock paper increased in the United States from 334,000 short tons in 1945 to 1,020,000 short tons in 1952.

More than 200,000 U. S. farms were electrified from June, 1951, to June, 1952.

Yankees Defend Inter-League Waiver Trades

Charge Rivals Are Ganging Up On New Yorkers

Points Up Cleveland Record in Deals

New York, Oct. 31 (AP) — The world champion New York Yankees were up in arms today at what they termed a legislative attempt to curb their winning habits.

"Isn't it about time it became clear that pennants are won on a ball field," crisply declared George M. Weiss, Yankee general manager, in commenting on a proposed new interleague waiver rule.

Weiss got his dander up because he considers the new rule is aimed at the Yankees for obtaining players from the National League who have helped them win four straight American League pennants and four straight World Series.

Among them were the hard-hitting veteran Johnny Mize in 1949; Johnny Hopp, another first baseman in 1950; and two pitchers, Johnny Sain in 1951 and Ewell Blackwell this year.

The new rule, drawn up by the major - minor executive council here Wednesday, provides that all clubs in both major leagues must waive on a player before he could be sold to a club in the other league after July 31. It will be voted on at the winter baseball meetings in Phoenix in December.

Under the current rule a player needs only to be waived by the clubs in his own circuit. He then can be sold to the highest bidder in the other league.

Aimed at Yankees

"Once again the Yankees have been cast in a bad light," Weiss asserted, "despite the fact the Yankees have never obtained a ball player by going behind or beyond the rules of baseball."

Weiss pointed out in a statement the Cleveland Indians, who finished second by two games to the Yankees in the 1952 race, passed up pitcher Rae Scarborough of the Red Sox when waivers were asked on him by the Sox.

"Scarborough came to the Yankees after every other club in the American League waived on him," Weiss said. "Scarborough won five games for the Yankees. Were these five victories transferred to the Indians, Cleveland might have been champions."

Not only that, Weiss pointed out, but the Yankees obtained Blackwell from the Cincinnati Reds this year by outbidding Cleveland as well as other clubs.

Compares Record

"Blackwell pitched in five games for the Yankees," Weiss said. "He hurled a total of 16 innings and contributed one victory to our pennant triumph.

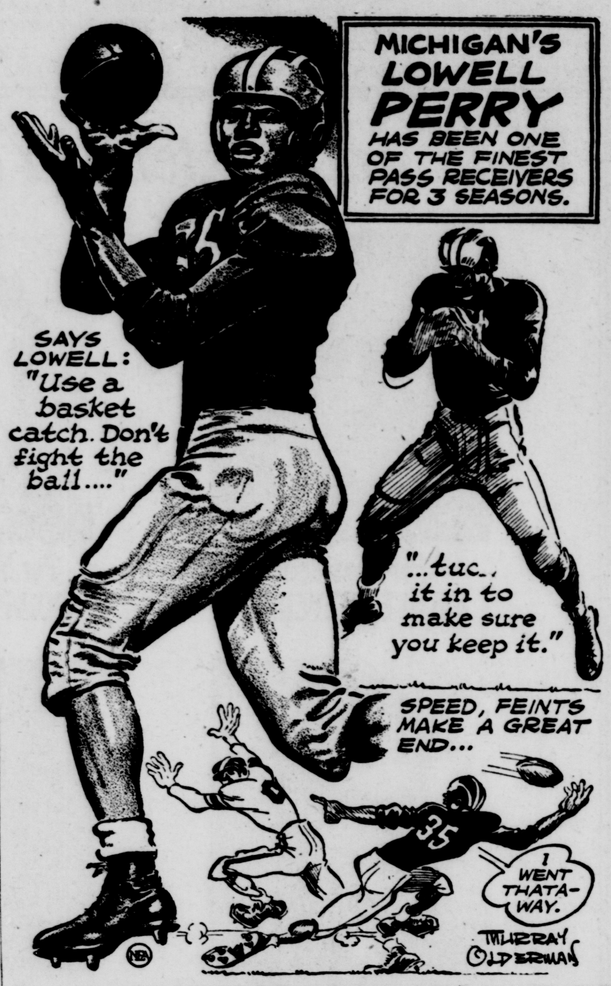

"On the other hand Cleveland purchased three players who had been waived out of the National League, George Strickland, shortstop; Wally Westlake, outfielder, and Ted Wilks, relief pitcher.

"Strickland played in thirty-one games and was the Cleveland club's regular shortstop down the stretch. Westlake played in 30 games. Wilks relieved in six games. That is a total of sixty-seven games against sixteen innings of pitching. Just how far back of the Yankees the runner-up Cleveland club would have been without the aid of these three players is problematical.

"It should be added that two of the three players could have been purchased by the Yankees but we passed them up.

"We have always lived by the rules passed at major league meetings and we will live by any rules passed at the next one."

Calling Your Shots in Casting

My AL McCLANE
(Fishing Editor)

One of our readers wants to know which part of the hand or arm is used by expert bait casters —the people who toss 'em fine and far off. I don't think we could rightly say any "part" is more important than another.

The whole arm contributes to the motion of casting. The movements are closely blended, however, and in a polished caster they appear as a simple wrist snap. How much muscle and pivot you apply to a cast depends on your tackle, and the distance you want to cast.

You can, for instance, toss a plug with a light rod using a very relaxed grip, allowing the rod to open your hand partly as the stick swings to vertical. By opening the hand you get a smooth cast with little forearm movement. With heavier tackle, or "compromise" tackle, you may find more work coming from the forearm and even the shoulder.

All casting in which weights are propelled is simply a matter of applying muscular effort to the rod to get velocity from the rod tip. The surf caster hangs on with two hands and literally slams his energy into the rod tip.

Looking at the tournament distance caster for a moment, we discover that he gets his velocity by strenuous maneuvers which actually bring his whole body into the cast.

He faces in a direction opposite his casting field, and proceeds with waist, foot and arm work destined to leave him facing his target with the plug taking off at a terrific speed. He stretches his arm as far as he can into the back cast, and swinging hard, sends the plug up and around as he pivots on one foot.

I've seen many casters twirl the plug lariat style faster and farther, until they nearly split their britches, starting the plug off like a rocket.

Long before I could call my shots, I fished with a fellow on the Ogeechee in the black waters of southern Georgia. The bank vegetation is very dense in this part of the country and the bass live among fallen trees, stumps and weeds. Every cast was a clinker for me, while John buzzed a big surface plug through tunnels that didn't look wider than a soup plate.

He used the typical short, stubborn casting stick so popular among southern gentlemen. I've come to realize that the only factor my partner ever considered in selecting a plug was "how it pulled the rod."

If it was weedless and painted yellow, so much the better—but the plug had to be a ⅝-ounce model; lighter plugs required more arm work and wobbled on the back cast, making his shots deflect left or right of the target. Heavier plugs would bend the rod too much, causing him to undershoot his mark. John was a practical angler.

I'm not suggesting a rod for every plug, merely emphasizing the fact that every rod has a definite bend and tip speed that is completely efficient.

This is the question the angler should put to himself: Does this rod give me an efficient casting bend and tip speed without my reaching over backward?

Durham, N. C. — (NEA) — On Duke's Fullback Trap, the quarterback gives the ball to the fullback.

Bill Murray

We have plenty of backs to make plays of this nature function properly. The 1951 offensive platoon returned with only the loss of End Blaine Earon. Quarterbacks Worth Lutz and Jerry Barger run the works.

SPORTSMAN'S DIGEST By hal sharp

Unknown Upsets Tom Robbins

Pinehurst, N. C., Oct. 31 (AP)—Dr. G. R. Love's return to his Oconomowoc, Wis., home has been delayed by 24 hours, at least. The 55-year-old, five handicap golfer and his wife had carefully assembled their luggage prior to Love's match yesterday against Thomas C. Robbins in the quarter-finals of the North and South Senior tournament.

They hoped to get an early start on their trip home. After all, wasn't Robbins the two-time U. S. Senior titlist? Hadn't he led the 230-man qualifying field with 69 on Monday? Hadn't he won a pair of 7 up matches in earlier rounds? And wasn't he the only scratch player in the field?

Against this gaudy record Love, a weekend golfer with an occasional Senior tournament fling, just didn't figure to offer much in the way of competition. And when Robbins birdied the first hole Wisconsin seemed a lot nearer.

But the good doctor hung on to birdie the second hole and square the match, which he eventually won, 1 up, from the 60-year-old Larchmont, N. Y., star, with the help of a stroke penalty that gave him the 16th hole and put him ahead to stay.

Today Love met Norfleet Ray, six handicap player from Pinehurst, in one semi-final. The other paired Chick Evans of Chicago, one-time holder of the National Open and Amateur titles, and Judd Brumley, 58-year-old hotel man from Greenville, Tenn. Each is a two handicap player.

Quarterback Bobby Layne and halfback Doak Walker of the Detroit Lions were also teammates on the Highland Park (Texas) High School team.

Good Time, Trotting's Biggest Winner, Ends Career With Yonkers Track Mark

Yonkers, Oct. 31 (AP)—Good Time, a spunky little four-legged dynamo with a heart as big as a bucket of oats, retired from the harness racing scene today after shattering the Yonkers Raceway track record for a mile.

Going against the clock he was caught in 2:00 4/5 on the half mile oval.

Good Time, greatest money-winning harness horse in history, broke his own Yonkers record of 2:01 flat for a half mile track. That mark was made here this Oct. 17, and equalled again Oct. 23.

Has Several Marks

His own half mile track mark of 2:00 1/5 was set in a race at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., last July 8. As it was, the mighty mite came close to that mark, despite a cool night and chilly breeze not conducive to such record-breaking attempts.

The world record for a mile for pacers against the clock on a half mile track is 1:59¾, set by the great Billy Direct at Altamont, N. Y., in 1939. The record for a race of 1:59 3/5 was made by Sampson Hanover last year at Delaware, Ohio. Ervin drove Sampson Hanover last year at Delaware, Ohio. Ervin drove Sampson Hanover on that occasion.

Good Time, a son of Hal Dale—on time by Volomite, hangs up his horseshoes with a total of $318,792.56 in the bank. He has earned $110,299.10 of this during the 1952 season, the most money ever earned in one year by a standardbred.

Cane's star is co-holder with Sampson Hanover of the world pacing race record for a one mile track. He was caught in 1:57 4/5 at Lexington, Ky., Oct. 5, 1951. He also holds the world record for a mile and a quarter, 2:31 3/5, at Roosevelt Raceway, last July 3.

Mexico Withdraws From Horse Show On Rules Dispute

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 31 (AP)—Two generals differed today over a rule interpretation that caused Mexico to withdraw from last night's international jumping at the Pennsylvania National Horse Show.

Gen. Humberto Mariles withdrew his team from the "in and out" event claiming the course was not according to international rules. France's Lt. Bertrand Du Breuil on Ukase won the event.

"I spent four to five hours a day schooling my horses at the regulation distances and I will not take a chance on injuring them or the riders," Mariles told a newsman.

Maj. Gen. Guy V. Henry, a retired U. S. Army officer and chief judge of the week-long show, denied that the course was not according to regulations of the Federation Equestrienne Internationale, governing body of international jumping.

"The course was set up completely and absolutely according to the rules of the FEI," Gen. Henry replied. "Mariles wanted it set up in the way his horses are trained."

Brig. Gen. A. H. Stackpole, show president, said the PNHS directors would meet with the captains of the five international teams to decide what could be done about the protest.

Dispute on Distance

The dispute centers on the distance between the closely-bunched obstacles known as "in and out jumps." Of the three used in last night's events, Mariles claimed the first was four feet too short while the last was four feet too long.

The Mexican general, who in the afternoon won the fault and out event for Mexico's fourth first place in eight jumps, said the "wrong distance on the last obstacle was responsible" for the fall of France's Pierre D'Oriola, 1952 Olympic champion.

D'Oriola was thrown when his mount L'Aiglonne refused to take the last obstacle. The Frenchman was treated for a scalp cut at the arena first aid station.

The incident overshadowed France's second blue-ribbon performance. Finishing second behind Dubreuil, 25-year old son of the commander of the French cavalry school, were Ireland's Lt. Col. Dan Corry on Glandore and the United States' Billy Steinkraus on Hollandia.

California-UCLA Another Big One

New York, Oct. 31 (AP)—Georgia Tech and Duke, two of the killers of the southland, meet in the No. 1 college football game of the day tomorrow as the season swings into the home stretch.

Most of the teams that were expected to set their opponents back before the campaign started have been living up to expectations with an upset here and there.

Unless the Engineer-Blue Devil contest ends in a tie, there will be one less undefeated, untied team among the major outfits when the results are in Saturday night. Both teams have identical 6-0 records and are rarin' to go. They've been pointing for this one all season.

The contest is rated pretty much a tossup, but when the two take the field in Durham, Tech probably will rate a slight favorite. Tech is No. 4 in The Associated Press poll, Duke No. 6.

Important games are sprinkled over the rest of the nation with the California-UCLA contest probably the best from a competitive standpoint.

This is another one that will have an important bearing on a championship—the Pacific Coast Conference and the Rose Bowl bid that goes along with it. The UCLAns are undefeated with a 6-0 mark while Pappy Waldorf's Golden Bears sport a 9-1 record.

They were among the elite, too, until last Saturday when Southern California shocked them. Like Southern Cal., UCLA is a defensive outfit and the experts on the coast think they can whip the power-packed Californians, especially with Paul Cameron apparently back in condition.

Spartans Meet Purdue

Of the top teams in the country, Michigan State, No. 1, seems to have the roughest task. It must beat Purdue, which has been cutting a swathe through the Western Conference with surprising ease.

The Boilermakers have a strong passing attack, which is just what has been bothering the Spartans all season. Still, it would be nothing more than wishful thinking to look for an upset. It shouldn't be a romp for the Spartans, though.

Maryland and Oklahoma, the second and third ranking teams, respectively, have what appear to be easier tasks. The Terrapins go against Boston University and Harry Agganis. Oklahoma, unbeaten but tied once, will test its offensive power against Iowa State in a game that figures to be a romp.

Kansas, the ninth-ranking team in the nation, still with hopes of beating out Oklahoma for the Big Seven title, plays Kansas State in a breather.

Villanova, No. 10 and the only other major unbeaten, untied team, tangles with the Parris Island Marines tonight in Philadelphia. Tonight's other two big contests pit Boston College against Clemson at Boston and Miami against Kentucky at Miami.

Penn vs. Penn State

In the Ivy League, Princeton, which still can win the title, takes on Brown. Penn, which is in the lead—it also is undefeated although tied twice—plays strong Penn State in a non-league tussle.

Texas and Southern Methodist meet in the big Southwest Conference game of the day. The Longhorns have been looking better and better and a triumph would make them definite favorites for the crown.

Basketball Refs Exams Set. Dec. 1

The annual written examination for membership in the Central Hudson Valley District Board of Approved Officials will be held at the Newburgh YMCA on Monday, Dec. 1.

In keeping with the national rules, this is the only examination given each year for membership in the National Association of Approved Officials and is held throughout the country at the same time.

Applications for this examination can be secured from the local board secretary-treasurer, Harold J. "Bus" Ochs, YMCA, Newburgh.

Ochs has announced that a rules interpretation clinic will be held prior to the examination, the place to be announced later. Applicants may also secure the official basketball guide for the 1952-53 season from the secretary.

Bobby Adams, Cincinnati Red third baseman, went to bat more than any other member of the team in 1952. He appeared 637 times.

Yankees Defend Inter-League Waiver Trades

Charge Rivals Are Ganging Up On New Yorkers

Points Up Cleveland Record in Deals

New York, Oct. 31 (AP) — The world champion New York Yankees were up in arms today at what they termed a legislative attempt to curb their winning habits.

"Isn't it about time it became clear that pennants are won on a ball field," crisply declared George M. Weiss, Yankee general manager, in commenting on a proposed new interleague waiver rule.

Weiss got his dander up because he considers the new rule is aimed at the Yankees for obtaining players from the National League who have helped them win four straight American League pennants and four straight World Series.

Among them were the hard-hitting veteran Johnny Mize in 1949; Johnny Hopp, another first baseman in 1950; and two pitchers, Johnny Sain in 1951 and Ewell Blackwell this year.

The new rule, drawn up by the major - minor executive council here Wednesday, provides that all clubs in both major leagues must waive on a player before he could be sold to a club in the other league after July 31. It will be voted on at the winter baseball meetings in Phoenix in December.

Under the current rule a player needs only to be waived by the clubs in his own circuit. He then can be sold to the highest bidder in the other league.

Aimed at Yankees

"Once again the Yankees have been cast in a bad light," Weiss asserted, "despite the fact the Yankees have never obtained a ball player by going behind or beyond the rules of baseball."

Weiss pointed out in a statement the Cleveland Indians, who finished second by two games to the Yankees in the 1952 race, passed up pitcher Rae Scarborough of the Red Sox when waivers were asked on him by the Sox.

"Scarborough came to the Yankees after every other club in the American League waived on him," Weiss said. "Scarborough won five games for the Yankees. Were these five victories transferred to the Indians, Cleveland might have been champions."

Not only that, Weiss pointed out, but the Yankees obtained Blackwell from the Cincinnati Reds this year by outbidding Cleveland as well as other clubs.

Compares Record

"Blackwell pitched in five games for the Yankees," Weiss said. "He hurled a total of 16 innings and contributed one victory to our pennant triumph.

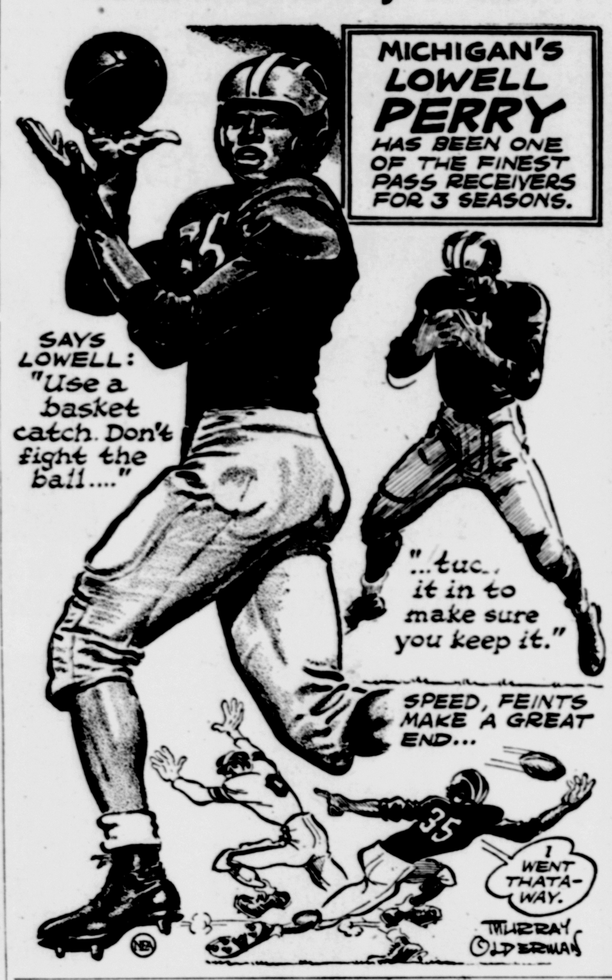

"On the other hand Cleveland purchased three players who had been waived out of the National League, George Strickland, shortstop; Wally Westlake, outfielder, and Ted Wilks, relief pitcher.

"Strickland played in thirty-one games and was the Cleveland club's regular shortstop down the stretch. Westlake played in 30 games. Wilks relieved in six games. That is a total of sixty-seven games against sixteen innings of pitching. Just how far back of the Yankees the runner-up Cleveland club would have been without the aid of these three players is problematical.

"It should be added that two of the three players could have been purchased by the Yankees but we passed them up.

"We have always lived by the rules passed at major league meetings and we will live by any rules passed at the next one."

Center, Left Guard Open Hole For Duke's Fullback Trap Play

Bill Murray

After the hand-off, the quarterback fakes to the left halfback.

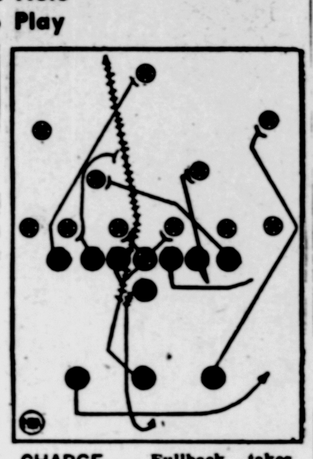

He completes his assignment by faking a pass.

We have plenty of backs to make plays of this nature function properly. The 1951 offensive platoon returned with only the loss of End Blaine Earon. Quarterbacks Worth Lutz and Jerry Barger run the works.

Good Time, Trotting's Biggest Winner, Ends Career With Yonkers Track Mark

Yonkers, Oct. 31 (AP)—Good Time, a spunky little four-legged dynamo with a heart as big as a bucket of oats, retired from the harness racing scene today after shattering the Yonkers Raceway track record for a mile.

Going against the clock he was caught in 2:00 4/5 on the half mile oval.

Bill Cane's six-year-old star, moreover, accomplished the feat under adverse conditions, for in a warmup shortly before the trial, he popped a curb in his left rear leg. This is a calf muscle injury.

Cane, Maestro of the famed Hambletonian, and driver-trainer Frank Ervin decided, however, to let Good Time make the attempt before a chilled crowd of 15,754.

Good Time, greatest money-winning harness horse in history, broke his own Yonkers record of 2:01 flat for a half mile track. That mark was made here this Oct. 17, and equalled again Oct. 23.

Has Several Marks

His own half mile track mark of 2:00 1/5 was set in a race at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., last July 8. As it was, the mighty mite came close to that mark, despite a cool night and chilly breeze not conducive to such record-breaking attempts.

Calling Your Shots in Casting

My AL McCLANE
(Fishing Editor)

One of our readers wants to know which part of the hand or arm is used by expert bait casters—the people who toss 'em fine and far off. I don't think we could rightly say any "part" is more important than another.

The whole arm contributes to the motion of casting. The movements are closely blended, however, and in a polished caster they appear as a simple wrist snap. How much muscle and pivot you apply to a cast depends on your tackle, and the distance you want to cast.

You can, for instance, toss a plug with a light rod using a very relaxed grip, allowing the rod to open your hand partly as the stick swings to vertical. By opening the hand you get a smooth cast with little forearm movement. With heavier tackle, or "compromise" tackle, you may find more work coming from the forearm and even the shoulder.

All casting in which weights are propelled is simply a matter of applying muscular effort to the rod to get velocity from the rod tip. The surf caster hangs on with two hands and literally slams his energy into the rod tip.

Looking at the tournament distance caster for a moment, we discover that he gets his velocity by strenuous maneuvers which actually bring his whole body into the cast.

He faces in a direction opposite his casting field, and proceeds with waist, foot and arm work destined to leave him facing his target with the plug taking off at a terrific speed. He stretches his arm as far as he can into the back cast, and swinging hard, sends the plug up and around as he pivots on one foot.

I've seen many casters twirl the plug lariat style faster and farther, until they nearly split their britches, starting the plug off like a rocket.

Long before I could call my shots, I fished with a fellow on the Ogeechee in the black waters of southern Georgia. The bank vegetation is very dense in this part of the country and the bass live among fallen trees, stumps and weeds. Every cast was a clinker for me, while John buzzed a big surface plug through tunnels that didn't look wider than a soup plate.

He used the typical short, stubborn casting stick so popular among southern gentlemen. I've come to realize that the only factor my partner ever considered in selecting a plug was "how it pulled the rod."

If it was weedless and painted yellow, so much the better—but the plug had to be a ⅝-ounce model; lighter plugs required more arm work and wobbled on the back cast, making his shots deflect left or right of the target. Heavier plugs would bend the rod too much, causing him to undershoot his mark. John was a practical angler.

I'm not suggesting a rod for every plug, merely emphasizing the fact that every rod has a definite bend and tip speed that is completely efficient.

This is the question the angler should put to himself: Does this rod give me an efficient casting bend and tip speed without my reaching over backward?

Unknown Upsets Tom Robbins

Pinehurst, N. C., Oct. 31 (AP)—Dr. G. R. Love's return to his Oconomowoc, Wis., home has been delayed by 24 hours, at least. The 55-year-old, five handicap golfer and his wife had carefully assembled their luggage prior to Love's match yesterday against Thomas C. Robbins in the quarter-finals of the North and South Senior tournament.

They hoped to get an early start on their trip home. After all, wasn't Robbins the two-time U. S. Senior titlist? Hadn't he led the 230-man qualifying field with 69 on Monday? Hadn't he won a pair of 7 up matches in earlier rounds? And wasn't he the only scratch player in the field?

Against this gaudy record Love, a weekend golfer with an occasional Senior tournament fling, just didn't figure to offer much in the way of competition. And when Robbins birdied the first hole Wisconsin seemed a lot nearer.

But the good doctor hung on to birdie the second hole and square the match, which he eventually won, 1 up, from the 60-year-old Larchmont, N. Y., star, with the help of a stroke penalty that gave him the 16th hole and put him ahead to stay.

Today Love met Norfleet Ray, six handicap player from Pinehurst, in one semi-final. The other paired Chick Evans of Chicago, one-time holder of the National Open and Amateur titles, and Judd Brumley, 58-year-old hotel man from Greenville, Tenn. Each is a two handicap player.

Quarterback Bobby Layne and halfback Doak Walker of the Detroit Lions were also teammates on the Highland Park (Texas) High School team.

Mexico Withdraws From Horse Show On Rules Dispute

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 31 (AP)—Two generals differed today over a rule interpretation that caused Mexico to withdraw from last night's international jumping at the Pennsylvania National Horse Show.

Gen. Humberto Mariles withdrew his team from the "in and out" event claiming the course was not according to international rules. France's Lt. Bertrand Du Breuil on Ukase won the event.

"I spent four to five hours a day schooling my horses at the regulation distances and I will not take a chance on injuring them or the riders," Mariles told a newsman.

Brig. Gen. A. H. Stackpole, show president, said the PNHS directors would meet with the captains of the five international teams to decide what could be done about the protest.

Dispute on Distance

The dispute centers on the distance between the closely-bunched obstacles known as "in and out jumps." Of the three used in last night's events, Mariles claimed the first was four feet too short while the last was four feet too long.

Maj. Hoople Goes to Dr. Hugh Zlobotny's Theorem to Pick Purdue Over Mich. State

By MAJOR AMOS B. HOOPLE
(Inventor of Split-Pea)

Egad! Plaudits are pouring in by telegraph, mail and kangaroo pouch!

From Maine to California grateful readers are congratulating me for my upset selections, such as Minnesota to beat Illnois; Vanderbilt to beat Florida and Duke to beat Tennessee.

Of course, there are a few sour apples on the tree. These carping critics we always have with us, but happily they number but a few among my zillions of readers.

My uncanny success has encouraged me to attempt a prediction of the Nov 8 games in the DUSO League. My good friend, Bill Burke, will be mighty happy to hear the results of my extensive scientific calculations. I need only the cooperation of our dear Sam Kalloch to make this day a memorable one.

For this week's college games, always seeking the most astute methods, I have adopted Dr. Hugh Zlobotny's interpretation of Euclid's theorem, and it should apply splendidly. The theorem holds that if "m" and "n" are two integers without a common factor, "hn" is divisible by "m" when and only when "h" is divisible by "m."

Thus take Maryland, which starts with "m." This team meets Boston University, which name contains the letter "n" twice. A few rapid calculations and we discover that Maryland will defeat Boston U., 35-0.

One of my amazing upsets for this Saturday is Purdue to beat Michigan State, 20 to 14.

Purdue has no "m" or "n" in it, therefore it is not divisible an an "m" team such as Michigan State. Har-rumph!

ENSIGN LEADS THE PACK

Ensign, the favorite, leads in the first race at Garden State Park, N. J., as the field rounds the clubhouse turn in the mile and a furlong event. Ensign's jockey Gayle Smith looks down at camera just as he passes. The winner stayed in front all the way to finish ten lengths ahead. He paid his backers $6.40 for $2 win wager. Larry Petersen, Jr., Blasts 695 Series In Major; Bessie Lynn Leads With 555

Larry Petersen, Jr., son of a prominent bowling father, was pounding on the door of the Hall of Fame last night in the Ferraro Major League.

A rousing 695 with games of 201, 229 and 265 enabled the former gob to edge Johnny Ferraro by seven sticks for high individual honors.

While Petersen was getting progressively better, Ferraro mysteriously slumped to 167 in the middle set. But on either side he posted 255 and 266 for 688.

Randy Kelder boosted his 200-plus individual average with a 259-210-645 slam and Ray Roux rattled the uprights for 633.

Bessie Lynn showed the way in the Friendship League with 555 on solos of 203, 174, 178, while Eleanor Singer, runnerup in the Friendship with 201-544, paced the Matinee Club circuit with 213-184-146-543.

The tall toppler in the Central Rec Major was Herman Seelbach with 623, via 240-213-170. Jennie Spada was the Central Rec Women's leader via 153-178-175-507.

Raible Sets Record

John Raible set a new individual high single mark of 243 in the Electrol and subsequent solos of 158 and 164 produced a league-leading 565.

Barney Fowler headed the Hercules League with 174-136-211 for 521 and Kiki Smith posted 155-148-187-490 for best-of-night in the Hercules Women.

Rae Sagen powered 445 on 155, 148, 142 in the Sisterhood circuit.

Chrissie Wilson—540

Chrissie Wilson was third in the Friendship circuit with 540 and Miriam Posner slammed 214, high for the night, 529. Marge Jansen rolled 509, Eleanor Dumenigo 489, Marge Williams 485, H. Mayer 206-484, Ada Markle 483, Elsie Dykes 482 and Phyl Gehringer 481.

Runnerup George Robinson posted 236-223-621 to tie Ed Murphy's 203-204-214 in the Central Rec Major. George Shufeldt hit 203-223-617 and Frank "Boots" Leskie accounted for 204-243-608.

The upper bracket also included Ad Jones 202-590; George Flemings 211-213-584, Tom Welch 225-584, Frank Grimaldi 213-577, Tom Carlino (218) and Eddie Heins (200)-576; Fred Ferraro 212-209-573 and Frank Spada 204-210-572.

Elsie Dykes Hits 498

Elsie Dykes was well on her way to a stout "500" series in the Matinee Club with 185 and 187. Then came a 126 finale and 498. Rose Chamberland hit 476 to tie Dottie Bell, while Bea McDonough rolled 435; Ann Manfro 433 and E. Lawrence 430.

Vince Noble's 517 trailed Fowler in the Hercules men's league, while J. Klobys posted 510 with a high of 222. Ed Smedes 499, W. Danford and J. Kennedy, 495 and Joe Dulin 492 rounded out the upper scoring contingent.

Army Faces Hard Game With VMI

Ed Weaver Listed Among the Injured

Virginia Military Institute invades Michie Stadium on Saturday to play Army for the sixth time. Army has won all five previous games.

Known as the Flying Squadron, the VMI squad poses a difficult task for Army in the way of defenses. The Southern Conference representatives run from three formations, namely: the T, double wing and I. The latter, conceived by Coach Frank Leahy of Notre Dame, is most effective, having clicked for an average of 5 yards per play.

Co-champions of the Southern Conference with Maryland in 1951, Ccach Tom Nugent has brought the Flying Squadron a long way up the football ladder since its last visit to Michie Stadium when Army romped to a decisive 40-14 victory in 1949.

Gave Virginia Scare

Thus far this fall VMI has defeated Richmond and Florida and lost to William and Mary and Miami and Virginia. Last week the Squadron came from behind in the final minutes to tie George Washington, 20-20.

It is interesting to note that though losing to powerful, highly regarded Virginia, VMI led the Cavaliers 7 to 6 up to the late minutes of the third quarter. Virginia squeezed out a victory on sheer manpower.

Still in a somewhat weakened condition due to injuries in the Columbia game, Army is preparing itself for another rugged afternoon. Added to the most recent injury list are Don Fuqua, best safety man in recent Army history; Godwin Ordway, first string center; and Ed Weaver, defensive star of the Columbia game.

Mario DeLucia, Army's backfield "find" of the season is expected to start at fullback.

Aerial Duel on TV

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 31 (AP)—For the second straight Saturday, TV football fans across the country will see two Big Ten aerial specialists in action as Ohio State's red-faced Buckeyes meet improving Northwestern tomorrow. The nationally-televised contest starts at 2:30 p. m. EST. Ohio State, considerably embarrassed by last Saturday's 8-0 upset by lowly Iowa, sends Johnny Burton against Northwestern's Dick Thomas in what should be a skilled sharp-shooting duel.

Independents Will Be Eligible to Play

A revised junior basketball program sponsored by the Recreation Department will be organized on Monday, Nov. 3, at 3:15 p. m. at the American Legion building, Andy Murphy, recreation superintendent, announced today.

Two divisions will be formed, one for boys who have not reached their 16th birthday by Nov. 15, 1952 and the other for boys who will not be 18 years old before the same date.

In past years league membership was restricted to teams representing church groups but this setup has been scrapped in favor of the new program which will include church groups, organizations and independent teams.

All boys interested in playing in the league are requested to attend the Nov. 3 meeting.

The league games will be played on the MJM court and at the new gym at the George Washington School.

The tentative schedule lists games at the MJM gym on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, with other contests at the George Washington School on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

No team entries will be accepted after Nov. 7.

Bratton Choice Over Miceli

New York, Oct. 31 (AP)—Unpredictable Johnny Bratton, inclined to follow good fights with lazy exhibitions, is a heavy favorite over rough Joe Miceli tonight at 10 p. m. (EST) in a nationally televised welterweight 10-rounder at Madison Square Garden.

But Miceli is no soft touch for this former NBA welter champ. Moving up in the ranking on the strength of wins over Luther Rawlings, Virgil Akins and Pierre Langlois the 23-year-old lad from New York's East Side can upset the odds.

Miceli is an unorthodox fighter, relying on a left hook-uppercut and a hell-for-leather slambang style. He figures to be moving in to Bratton, and crowding him.

Both fighters have 70 per cent winning records. Bratton in 74 bouts has won 52, lost 19 and fought three draws. He was stopped twice, each time on a broken jaw. Kid Gavilan also broke his jaw in winning the welter title last year but Johnny managed to last the 15 rounds.

Miceli has a 36-11-4 records for 51 starts. He never has been stopped, since he entered the Army in February. He has had six fights, winning four, losing to Bobby Dykes in a close battle and going 10 to a draw with Joey Giardello.

Defensive Backs Rejoin Cornell

Bear Mountain, Oct. 31 (AP)—Tony D'Agostino and Al Sebald may reinforce Cornell's backfield against Columbia passes Saturday.

Cornell coach Lefty James said yesterday that the men, both offensive backs, might be used in the defense backfield for the game against the Lions in New York.

The 42-man Big Red squad came here last night from the campus at Ithaca.

Indianapolis—The Cleveland Indians bought the last outstanding stock in the Indianapolis Indians of the American Association and now have 100 per cent ownership in the club.

New York — The New York Yankees defended their action in obtaining players from the National League under the waiver rules, and said that the club had never obtained a player "by going behind or beyond the rules of baseball."

Detroit Lion quarterback Bobby Layne completed 152 forward passes during each of the 1950 and 1951 seasons in the National Football League.

Maj. Hoople Goes to Dr. Hugh Zlobotny's Theorem to Pick Purdue Over Mich. State

By MAJOR AMOS B. HOOPLE
(Inventor of Split-Pea)

Egad! Plaudits are pouring in by telegraph, mail and kangaroo pouch!

From Maine to California grateful readers are congratulating me for my upset selections, such as Minnesota to beat Illnois; Vanderbilt to beat Florida and Duke to beat Tennessee.

Of course, there are a few sour apples on the tree. These carping critics we always have with us, but happily they number but a few among my zillions of readers.

My uncanny success has encouraged me to attempt a prediction of the Nov 8 games in the DUSO League. My good friend, Bill Burke, will be mighty happy to hear the results of my extensive scientific calculations. I need only the cooperation of our dear Sam Kalloch to make this day a memorable one.

For this week's college games, always seeking the most astute methods, I have adopted Dr. Hugh Zlobotny's interpretation of Euclid's theorem, and it should apply splendidly. The theorem holds that if "m" and "n" are two integers without a common factor, "hn" is divisible by "m" when and only when "h" is divisible by "m."

Thus take Maryland, which starts with "m." This team meets Boston University, which name contains the letter "n" twice. A few rapid calculations and we discover that Maryland will defeat Boston U., 35-0.

One of my amazing upsets for this Saturday is Purdue to beat Michigan State, 20 to 14.

Purdue has no "m" or "n" in it, therefore it is not divisible an an "m" team such as Michigan State. Har-rumph!

ENSIGN LEADS THE PACK

Ensign, the favorite, leads in the first race at Garden State Park, N. J., as the field rounds the clubhouse turn in the mile and a furlong event. Ensign's jockey Gayle Smith looks down at camera just as he passes. The winner stayed in front all the way to finish ten lengths ahead. He paid his backers $6.40 for $2 win wager. Larry Petersen, Jr., Blasts 695 Series In Major; Bessie Lynn Leads With 555

Larry Petersen, Jr., son of a prominent bowling father, was pounding on the door of the Hall of Fame last night in the Ferraro Major League.

A rousing 695 with games of 201, 229 and 265 enabled the former gob to edge Johnny Ferraro by seven sticks for high individual honors.

While Petersen was getting progressively better, Ferraro mysteriously slumped to 167 in the middle set. But on either side he posted 255 and 266 for 688.

Randy Kelder boosted his 200-plus individual average with a 259-210-645 slam and Ray Roux rattled the uprights for 633.

Bessie Lynn showed the way in the Friendship League with 555 on solos of 203, 174, 178, while Eleanor Singer, runnerup in the Friendship with 201-544, paced the Matinee Club circuit with 213-184-146-543.

The tall toppler in the Central Rec Major was Herman Seelbach with 623, via 240-213-170. Jennie Spada was the Central Rec Women's leader via 153-178-175-507.

Raible Sets Record

John Raible set a new individual high single mark of 243 in the Electrol and subsequent solos of 158 and 164 produced a league-leading 565.

Barney Fowler headed the Hercules League with 174-136-211 for 521 and Kiki Smith posted 155-148-187-490 for best-of-night in the Hercules Women.

Rae Sagen powered 445 on 155, 148, 142 in the Sisterhood circuit.

The "600" group in the Ferraro Major also listed Lew Hymes 231-213-622 and Jack Houghtaling 207-213-202-622. Phil Corrado clipped 214-609 and Bill Murray had 227-202-608. Larry "765" Weishaupt near-missed with 222-225-599; Cliff Davis pounded 208-215-598; Angelo Ferraro 211-212-590; Larry Petersen, Sr. 245-584; Harry Wilber 267-583; George Flemings 217-232-583; Frank Grimaldi 581 and George Robinson 212-580.

Runnerup George Robinson posted 236-223-621 to tie Ed Murphy's 203-204-214 in the Central Rec Major. George Shufeldt hit 203-223-617 and Frank "Boots" Leskie accounted for 204-243-608.

Elsie Dykes Hits 498

Elsie Dykes was well on her way to a stout "500" series in the Matinee Club with 185 and 187. Then came a 126 finale and 498. Rose Chamberland hit 476 to tie Dottie Bell, while Bea McDonough rolled 435; Ann Manfro 433 and E. Lawrence 430.

Army Faces Hard Game With VMI

Ed Weaver Listed Among the Injured

Virginia Military Institute invades Michie Stadium on Saturday to play Army for the sixth time. Army has won all five previous games.

Known as the Flying Squadron, the VMI squad poses a difficult task for Army in the way of defenses. The Southern Conference representatives run from three formations, namely: the T, double wing and I. The latter, conceived by Coach Frank Leahy of Notre Dame, is most effective, having clicked for an average of 5 yards per play.

Co-champions of the Southern Conference with Maryland in 1951, Coach Tom Nugent has brought the Flying Squadron a long way up the football ladder since its last visit to Michie Stadium when Army romped to a decisive 40-14 victory in 1949.

Gave Virginia Scare

Thus far this fall VMI has defeated Richmond and Florida and lost to William and Mary and Miami and Virginia. Last week the Squadron came from behind in the final minutes to tie George Washington, 20-20.

It is interesting to note that though losing to powerful, highly regarded Virginia, VMI led the Cavaliers 7 to 6 up to the late minutes of the third quarter. Virginia squeezed out a victory on sheer manpower.

Still in a somewhat weakened condition due to injuries in the Columbia game, Army is preparing itself for another rugged afternoon. Added to the most recent injury list are Don Fuqua, best safety man in recent Army history; Godwin Ordway, first string center; and Ed Weaver, defensive star of the Columbia game.

Mario DeLucia, Army's backfield "find" of the season is expected to start at fullback.

Aerial Duel on TV

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 31 (AP)—For the second straight Saturday, TV football fans across the country will see two Big Ten aerial specialists in action as Ohio State's red-faced Buckeyes meet improving Northwestern tomorrow. The nationally-televised contest starts at 2:30 p. m. EST. Ohio State, considerably embarrassed by last Saturday's 8-0 upset by lowly Iowa, sends Johnny Burton against Northwestern's Dick Thomas in what should be a skilled sharp-shooting duel.

Independents Will Be Eligible to Play

A revised junior basketball program sponsored by the Recreation Department will be organized on Monday, Nov. 3, at 3:15 p. m. at the American Legion building, Andy Murphy, recreation superintendent, announced today.

Two divisions will be formed, one for boys who have not reached their 16th birthday by Nov. 15, 1952 and the other for boys who will not be 18 years old before the same date.

In past years league membership was restricted to teams representing church groups but this setup has been scrapped in favor of the new program which will include church groups, organizations and independent teams.

All boys interested in playing in the league are requested to attend the Nov. 3 meeting.

The league games will be played on the MJM court and at the new gym at the George Washington School.

The tentative schedule lists games at the MJM gym on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, with other contests at the George Washington School on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

No team entries will be accepted after Nov. 7.

Bratton Choice Over Miceli

New York, Oct. 31 (AP)—Unpredictable Johnny Bratton, inclined to follow good fights with lazy exhibitions, is a heavy favorite over rough Joe Miceli tonight at 10 p. m. (EST) in a nationally televised welterweight 10-rounder at Madison Square Garden.

But Miceli is no soft touch for this former NBA welter champ. Moving up in the ranking on the strength of wins over Luther Rawlings, Virgil Akins and Pierre Langlois the 23-year-old lad from New York's East Side can upset the odds.

Miceli is an unorthodox fighter, relying on a left hook-uppercut and a hell-for-leather slambang style. He figures to be moving in to Bratton, and crowding him.

Both fighters have 70 per cent winning records. Bratton in 74 bouts has won 52, lost 19 and fought three draws. He was stopped twice, each time on a broken jaw. Kid Gavilan also broke his jaw in winning the welter title last year but Johnny managed to last the 15 rounds.

Miceli has a 36-11-4 records for 51 starts. He never has been stopped, since he entered the Army in February. He has had six fights, winning four, losing to Bobby Dykes in a close battle and going 10 to a draw with Joey Giardello.

Defensive Backs Rejoin Cornell

Bear Mountain, Oct. 31 (AP)—Tony D'Agostino and Al Sebald may reinforce Cornell's backfield against Columbia passes Saturday.

Cornell coach Lefty James said yesterday that the men, both offensive backs, might be used in the defense backfield for the game against the Lions in New York.

The 42-man Big Red squad came here last night from the campus at Ithaca.

Indianapolis—The Cleveland Indians bought the last outstanding stock in the Indianapolis Indians of the American Association and now have 100 per cent ownership in the club.

New York — The New York Yankees defended their action in obtaining players from the National League under the waiver rules, and said that the club had never obtained a player "by going behind or beyond the rules of baseball."

Detroit Lion quarterback Bobby Layne completed 152 forward passes during each of the 1950 and 1951 seasons in the National Football League.

Mother Admits Embezzlement

Mrs. Beatrice Hollingsworth, left, 47-year-old trusted bookkeeper in a Detroit, Mich., firm, was named in a bad check warrant recommended by Prosecutor Gerald K. O'Brien who said she admitted embezzlement of thousands of dollars from her employer to further her daughter's career. The daughter, Jill, right, 17, cited this year in a local contest as one of Detroit's most beautiful girls, is in Hollywood where she is studying in an acting school. Mrs. Hollingsworth was arrested night before as she stepped off a plane from Los Angeles. (AP Wirephoto).

Taft Blisters HST

Taft said the commander of the Eighth Army in Korea wants to arm more South Korean troops but the Truman-Acheson administration won't let him." He added:

"They seem to be determined not to win the Korean war but to make sure the war will continue."

Refers to Letter

Taft referred to a letter cited Wednesday night by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the Republican nominee for president. Eisenhower said a letter from Gen. James A. Van Fleet said Van Fleet had received "very little encouragement and never an approval" for his own efforts to train new South Korean divisions.

Taft said "this and other fruits of the administration's foreign policy alone are enough" to justify defeat of the Democrats and their presidential nominee, Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois.

"This was a Truman war to begin with," Taft said. "Gen Douglas MacArthur was dismissed because he had a plan for winning the war and they didn't want to win.

"Stevenson says they have no plan now. But General Eisenhower has again proposed to arm the South Koreans. Stevenson and Truman say it can't be done."

Taft urged reelection of Indiana's Republican senator, William E. Jenner, saying Jenner "has fought along with me" in Congress against "socialism" and Jenner's opponent, Democratic Gov. Henry F. Schricker, "will go along with the New Deal."

Prison Pals Caught At Roadblock After Dash Thru Florida

Fernandina Beach, Fla., Oct. 31 (AP)—James Francis Hill and a prison mate were recaptured at nearby Yulee today and two of the eight persons they kidnaped during an all night race through Florida were freed.

Hill, 31, and his prison pal, James Douglas, 30, were nabbed at a roadblock on U. S. Highway 17, about 20 miles north of Jacksonville.

With them as captives were an air force man from Tampa, Pfc. Robert H. Tarrh and MacDill Field, and a young woman, Miss Marilyn Cummings of Winfield, Ill. The desperados ware driving the couple's car when halted.

Events Started Yesterday

Their fantastic escapade began yesterday with Hill forcing Johnny Trish of Buffalo, N. Y., to drive him to the prison camp near Bartow, Fla., where Hill held guards at bay with a pistol and set four men free. The four were Douglas, Hubert Gunn, Robert Key and Richard Schmidt. All have been recaptured.

Hill was the last of three men sought for a two-day kidnap-dash through Georgia and Tennessee during which they held 20 persons at one time or another.

Virgil Lemay, 15, was the first captured and Charles Hopkins, another prison mate of Hill's, was arrested in Jacksonville Tuesday afternoon by an FBI agent who recognized him at the post office.

Both Lemay and Hopkins said Hill was the ringleader. His kidnap victims said Hill called himself a "three-gun maniac."

The Georgia and Tennessee victims were robbed but not harmed.

After the road gang delivery Thursday, all six fled in Trish's car, doubled back to Bartow and split up on a side road. Douglas went with Hill. The two were former prison mates at Florida State Penitentiary at Raiford.

Break Into Home

The other three took off through the woods. Trish was set free.

Hill and Douglas next broke into the home of Mrs. C. E. Hoover, stole her rings and car and left.

About 10:30 last night they appeared at Haines City, abandoned Mrs. Hoover's car and kidnaped R. W. Woodward and his girl, Miss Mamie Grimsley. With the young couple begging to be set free, the convicts roared at breakneck speed over side roads headed north.

At 2 a. m. Hill and Douglas released the boy and girl and kidnaped a man, his wife and child at Bushnell. The family was released after another wild dash northward and a pickup truck was commandeered.

The truck was abandoned near Starke. A car with a Virginia license was halted, however, and the MacDill field soldier, Tarrh, and his girl, Miss Cummings, were their next victims. The desperados were driving this couple's car when halted.

Bloodhounds Show Way

The other three men freed by Hill were rounded up during the night. Bloodhounds led searchers to Schmidt, 34, soon after midnight. Next the bloodhounds sniffed out Gunn, 23, and he was picked up.

Key was nabbed by a farmer who had been searching for him. Key was armed with a rifle but the farmer pulled a pistol and the escapee surrendered.

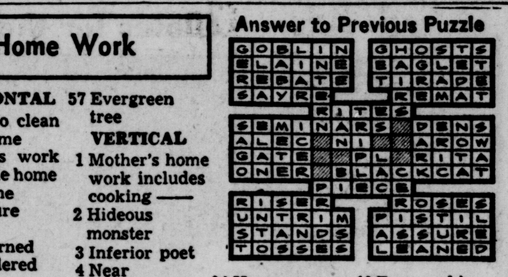

All those caught in the area were taken to the county jail at Bartow.

Tragedy Is Averted

Silver Spring, Md., Oct. 31 (AP)—A tragedy was barely averted here today when Gov. Adlai Stevenson campaign train, having overshot its stopping place, suddenly backed up on a crowd that pressed around the rear. There were shouts of "stop the train, stop the train" from the crowd and a scramble to get out of the way. A railroad man pulled the emergency stop cord and the train halted without hitting anyone. Several persons were knocked down, however, in the rush to get out of the way of the train.

Refers to Letter

Taft referred to a letter cited Wednesday night by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the Republican nominee for president. Eisenhower said a letter from Gen. James A. Van Fleet said Van Fleet had received "very little encouragement and never an approval" for his own efforts to train new South Korean divisions.

Taft said "this and other fruits of the administration's foreign policy alone are enough" to justify defeat of the Democrats and their presidential nominee, Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois.

"This was a Truman war to begin with," Taft said. "Gen Douglas MacArthur was dismissed because he had a plan for winning the war and they didn't want to win.

"Stevenson says they have no plan now. But General Eisenhower has again proposed to arm the South Koreans. Stevenson and Truman say it can't be done."

Taft urged reelection of Indiana's Republican senator, William E. Jenner, saying Jenner "has fought along with me" in Congress against "socialism" and Jenner's opponent, Democratic Gov. Henry F. Schricker, "will go along with the New Deal."

Prison Pals Caught At Roadblock After Dash Thru Florida

Fernandina Beach, Fla., Oct. 31 (AP)—James Francis Hill and a prison mate were recaptured at nearby Yulee today and two of the eight persons they kidnaped during an all night race through Florida were freed.

Hill, 31, and his prison pal, James Douglas, 30, were nabbed at a roadblock on U. S. Highway 17, about 20 miles north of Jacksonville.

With them as captives were an air force man from Tampa, Pfc. Robert H. Tarrh and MacDill Field, and a young woman, Miss Marilyn Cummings of Winfield, Ill. The desperados ware driving the couple's car when halted.

Events Started Yesterday

Their fantastic escapade began yesterday with Hill forcing Johnny Trish of Buffalo, N. Y., to drive him to the prison camp near Bartow, Fla., where Hill held guards at bay with a pistol and set four men free. The four were Douglas, Hubert Gunn, Robert Key and Richard Schmidt. All have been recaptured.

Hill was the last of three men sought for a two-day kidnap-dash through Georgia and Tennessee during which they held 20 persons at one time or another.

Virgil Lemay, 15, was the first captured and Charles Hopkins, another prison mate of Hill's, was arrested in Jacksonville Tuesday afternoon by an FBI agent who recognized him at the post office.

Both Lemay and Hopkins said Hill was the ringleader. His kidnap victims said Hill called himself a "three-gun maniac."

The Georgia and Tennessee victims were robbed but not harmed.

After the road gang delivery Thursday, all six fled in Trish's car, doubled back to Bartow and split up on a side road. Douglas went with Hill. The two were former prison mates at Florida State Penitentiary at Raiford.

Break Into Home

The other three took off through the woods. Trish was set free.

Hill and Douglas next broke into the home of Mrs. C. E. Hoover, stole her rings and car and left.

About 10:30 last night they appeared at Haines City, abandoned Mrs. Hoover's car and kidnaped R. W. Woodward and his girl, Miss Mamie Grimsley. With the young couple begging to be set free, the convicts roared at breakneck speed over side roads headed north.

At 2 a. m. Hill and Douglas released the boy and girl and kidnaped a man, his wife and child at Bushnell. The family was released after another wild dash northward and a pickup truck was commandeered.

The truck was abandoned near Starke. A car with a Virginia license was halted, however, and the MacDill field soldier, Tarrh, and his girl, Miss Cummings, were their next victims. The desperados were driving this couple's car when halted.

Bloodhounds Show Way

The other three men freed by Hill were rounded up during the night. Bloodhounds led searchers to Schmidt, 34, soon after midnight. Next the bloodhounds sniffed out Gunn, 23, and he was picked up.

Key was nabbed by a farmer who had been searching for him. Key was armed with a rifle but the farmer pulled a pistol and the escapee surrendered.

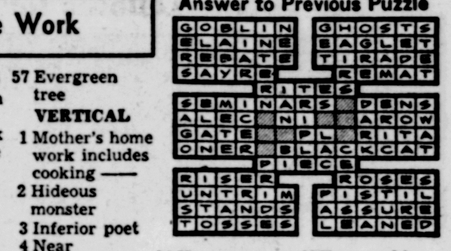

All those caught in the area were taken to the county jail at Bartow.

Tragedy Is Averted

Silver Spring, Md., Oct. 31 (AP)—A tragedy was barely averted here today when Gov. Adlai Stevenson campaign train, having overshot its stopping place, suddenly backed up on a crowd that pressed around the rear. There were shouts of "stop the train, stop the train" from the crowd and a scramble to get out of the way. A railroad man pulled the emergency stop cord and the train halted without hitting anyone. Several persons were knocked down, however, in the rush to get out of the way of the train.

vestigation would include Wilson's activities. Larson said the contract was canceled last Monday after Wilson relayed word from a reliable firm that Companhia Atlantica was seeking to buy tungsten in the open market and resell it to the U. S. at a higher price.

This, Larson said, violated terms of the contract, in effect since Sept. 11 and signed by Westbrook on behalf of the Portuguese company. Even so, Larson added, he would have canceled it anyway if he had known any fee was involved.

Larson said the contract was canceled before any deliveries were mades at a stipulated price of $57 a ton. He said the price has since dropped to about $55.

Denies Breaking Contract

In Lisbon, Dr. Celestino Soares, director of Companhia Atlantica, denied breaking the contract or receiving notice of cancellation.

"There has not been a single infraction of the clauses by any side," Dr. Soares said. "Companhia Atlantica has not bought tungsten on the open market, and the commissions and payments envisaged and due in due course to the agents are absolutely legal."

Heinz Pulvermann, with whom Westbrook said he organized the company, called the deal a "mere business affair." He said it was in the interest of western defense and "Washington, the U. S. Embassy in Lisbon and Portuguese authorities know about it."

Pulvermann, a German-born U. S. citizen of Rye, N. Y., said his dealings with Westbrook "had nothing to do with politics and I myself am not a Democrat."

Refuses to Speculate

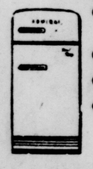

Larson would not speculate whether there had been any violation of a newly-enacted law which bars payment of percentage fees to any but bona fide employes or agents of a company.

He said the missing letter telling of the fee announcement was replaced by a new letter and he did not know of it until it was called to his attention by a Herald Tribune reporter.

The newspaper said the 5 per cent fee, totaling $450,000, was to be shared this way: $45,000 to Thurman Hill, a former Treasury Department attorney and unsuccessful candidate for the Senate in 1944 against the late Sen. Clyde M. Reed of Kansas, and $405,000 split by Westbrook and Pulvermann.

Westbrook, who lives at Hot Springs, Ark., is a former member of the Texas legislature. He held several federal positions during the early days of the Roosevelt New Deal administration.

It is estimated that between 1940 and 1950 U. S. population increased 15 per cent and church membership 34 per cent.

Fired

Col. Lawrence Westbrok, an assistant of Democratic Chairman Stephen A. Mitchell, has been fired for allegedly helping negotiate a government contract while employed by Democratic National Committee.

Firemen Are Hurt In Syracuse Blaze

Syracuse, Oct. 31 (AP)—A roaring fire, marked by gasoline explosions, raced through the street floor of a large automobile agency early today leaving a trail of $500,000 in damage.

Several firemen were hurt battling the blaze in the E. M. O'Donnell Company, which the firm claims is the largest food distributing agency in America. None was hospitalized.

The fire—second in the building in eight hours—melted hugh steel supporting girders and flaming timbers crashed down around the fire fighters. New model cars and trucks were smashed and scorched.

Thirteen fire companies—more than half the city's fire fighting units—responded to the general alarm.

Second Deputy Chief Harry J. Coon said the fire apparently originated in the west end of the service shop.

The damage estimate was made by a company official, who declined the use of his name.

Last night company employes fought a fire in the repair shop and firemen put it out in about five minutes.

District Chief Leo Pachek said the first fire apparently was touched off by a short circuit in a battery charger that ignited oil-soaked rags.

Firemen said the two fires apparently were not related.

No Rain in View To Halt Blazes in Eastern Forests

(By The Associated Press)

A mass of dry air covered the eastern half of the nation again today, indicating no immediate rain to halt the ever-spreading fires which are burning over millions of acres of wooded areas.

The damage from the flames which have whipped over rich timber-lands in more than a score of states mounted into the millions of dollars. The situation in some areas was regarded as serious. Flames from grassland and brush fires were reported in several cities.

Heavy palls of smoke were reported over many areas in the fire belt east of the Mississippi, resulting in widespread reduction of visibility. Much of Oklahoma was covered with a haze of smoke and dust yesterday, cutting visibility to four miles in some areas.

The U. S. Weather Bureau had no immediate hope of a heavy general rainfall over the fire-stricken regions. Many states have had only little rain in the last two months.

In Western Part

The only rainfall reported early today was in the western part of the country—light showers in Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington. No serious fires have been reported in western states.

Mild weather was reported over most of the country with temperatures a little below seasonal levels east of the Appalachians.

Damage from the fires in several states were estimated at more than a million dollars each, with Louisiana reporting damages to forests at two million dollars. The worst fires in history have swept Tennessee woodlands and officials have not estimated the damage. In Illinois, Indiana and Mississippi, the damage soared to an estimated one million dollars in each state, with fires still raging.

In Missouri, Gov. Forrest Smith said the situation in some areas was critical. Several farm houses were destroyed near Clinton, yesterday when a field fire roared out of control. In Joplin, a grass fire spread across two square miles, destroying several homes, and other buildings.

Woods in Rhode Island were closed at midnight Thursday. In New Hampshire woods which had been closed earlier this week were reopened after snowfall had eased the fire situation. Smoking and open fires still are banned in southern New Hampshire forests.

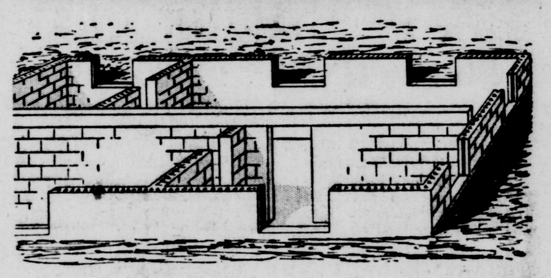

Energy of Ohio's annual rainfall is enough to generate 1,000,000 horsepower continuously.

Larson would not speculate whether there had been any violation of a newly-enacted law which bars payment of percentage fees to any but bona fide employes or agents of a company.

He said the missing letter telling of the fee announcement was replaced by a new letter and he did not know of it until it was called to his attention by a Herald Tribune reporter.

The newspaper said the 5 per cent fee, totaling $450,000, was to be shared this way: $45,000 to Thurman Hill, a former Treasury Department attorney and unsuccessful candidate for the Senate in 1944 against the late Sen. Clyde M. Reed of Kansas, and $405,000 split by Westbrook and Pulvermann.

Westbrook, who lives at Hot Springs, Ark., is a former member of the Texas legislature. He held several federal positions during the early days of the Roosevelt New Deal administration.

It is estimated that between 1940 and 1950 U. S. population increased 15 per cent and church membership 34 per cent.

Fired

Col. Lawrence Westbrok, an assistant of Democratic Chairman Stephen A. Mitchell, has been fired for allegedly helping negotiate a government contract while employed by Democratic National Committee.

Firemen Are Hurt In Syracuse Blaze

Syracuse, Oct. 31 (AP)—A roaring fire, marked by gasoline explosions, raced through the street floor of a large automobile agency early today leaving a trail of $500,000 in damage.

Several firemen were hurt battling the blaze in the E. M. O'Donnell Company, which the firm claims is the largest food distributing agency in America. None was hospitalized.

The fire—second in the building in eight hours—melted hugh steel supporting girders and flaming timbers crashed down around the fire fighters. New model cars and trucks were smashed and scorched.

Thirteen fire companies—more than half the city's fire fighting units—responded to the general alarm.

Second Deputy Chief Harry J. Coon said the fire apparently originated in the west end of the service shop.

The damage estimate was made by a company official, who declined the use of his name.

Last night company employes fought a fire in the repair shop and firemen put it out in about five minutes.

District Chief Leo Pachek said the first fire apparently was touched off by a short circuit in a battery charger that ignited oil-soaked rags.

Firemen said the two fires apparently were not related.

No Rain in View To Halt Blazes in Eastern Forests

(By The Associated Press)

A mass of dry air covered the eastern half of the nation again today, indicating no immediate rain to halt the ever-spreading fires which are burning over millions of acres of wooded areas.

The damage from the flames which have whipped over rich timber-lands in more than a score of states mounted into the millions of dollars. The situation in some areas was regarded as serious. Flames from grassland and brush fires were reported in several cities.

Heavy palls of smoke were reported over many areas in the fire belt east of the Mississippi, resulting in widespread reduction of visibility. Much of Oklahoma was covered with a haze of smoke and dust yesterday, cutting visibility to four miles in some areas.

The U. S. Weather Bureau had no immediate hope of a heavy general rainfall over the fire-stricken regions. Many states have had only little rain in the last two months.

In Western Part

The only rainfall reported early today was in the western part of the country—light showers in Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington. No serious fires have been reported in western states.

Mild weather was reported over most of the country with temperatures a little below seasonal levels east of the Appalachians.

Damage from the fires in several states were estimated at more than a million dollars each, with Louisiana reporting damages to forests at two million dollars. The worst fires in history have swept Tennessee woodlands and officials have not estimated the damage. In Illinois, Indiana and Mississippi, the damage soared to an estimated one million dollars in each state, with fires still raging.

In Missouri, Gov. Forrest Smith said the situation in some areas was critical. Several farm houses were destroyed near Clinton, yesterday when a field fire roared out of control. In Joplin, a grass fire spread across two square miles, destroying several homes, and other buildings.

Woods in Rhode Island were closed at midnight Thursday. In New Hampshire woods which had been closed earlier this week were reopened after snowfall had eased the fire situation. Smoking and open fires still are banned in southern New Hampshire forests.

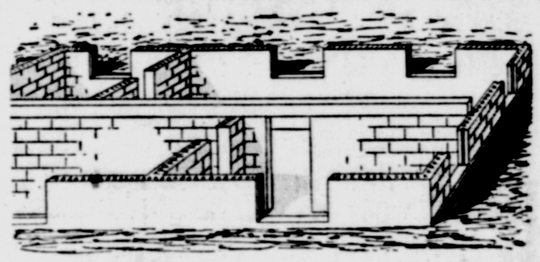

Energy of Ohio's annual rainfall is enough to generate 1,000,000 horsepower continuously.
